Senate media report says GMA is not the State

By Philip C. Tubeza

SHE IS NOT THE STATE AND SHE is not Louis XIV, the 17th century absolute monarch who ruled France for 72 years.

This was the thrust of Senate Committee Report No. 69 released yesterday which condemned what it said were moves by President Macapagal-Arroyo's administration to "control and muzzle" media during the weeklong state of emergency she declared in February. The 34-page report said: "The President is not the State when it is mentioned in the Constitution. But Malacañang, in the manner of Louis XIV, equates the State as the President, Hence, the unbridled disregard of constitutional limitations on the BANGKOK - THAIland's embattled Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra abruptly announced Tuesday he will step down from office, bowing to a mounting opposition campaign seeking his ouster over allegations of corruption and abuse of power.

Thaksin's announcement came shortly after he met with the country's revered monarch, King Bhumibol Adulyadej, at the latter's seaside palace in southern Hua Hin.

"I am sorry that I will not accept the premier post," Thaksin said during a televised speech. "I apologize to my 16 million supporters that I cannot take the post of prime minister, but I will still carry on as a caretaker prime minister until my successor is chosen."

"My reason for not accepting the post of prime minister is because this year is an auspicious year for the King, whose 60th anniversary on the throne is just 60 days away," Thaksin said.

"I beg all Thais to sacrifice for the king," he added.

He said that he would remain as caretaker head of government until his replacement is elected once Parliament reopens within the next 30 days.

"We have no time to quarrel," he said. "I want to see Thai people unite and forget what has happened."

Cha-cha is doomed - Pimentel

By TJ Burgonio

WITH NO LAW OR THE FUNDS TO SUSTAIN IT, THE people's initiative now being vigorously pursued by the Arroyo administration to amend the Constitution will not prosper, Senate Minority Leader Aquilino Pimentel 'Jr. said yesterday.

Pimentel said the initiative, now being carried out in the barangays through a signature campaign, would eventually be faced with legal as well as financial obstacles.

"Like a stack of cards, that façade of legality that JDV (Speaker Jose de Venecia), Gloria (President Macapagal-Arroyo) and (Local Government Secretary Ronaldo) Puno are advocating will fall flat on its own-weight," he said in an interview.

"The reason is obvious—there are no legal props to sustain the position that there are no viable alternatives to the peaceful ouster of Gloria," he said.

During Monday's Senate inquiry into the "Helio Garci" wiretap scandal, Election Commissioner Resurrection Borra had admitted the agency lacked the funds to verify the signatures on the people's initiative and to hold a plebiscite. The verification of millions of signatures alone is estimated to cost P1 billion.

Borra also said the Commission on Elections should dismiss any petitions to amend the 1987 Constitution after the Supreme Court had ruled that the initiative and Referendum Act was "inadequate" to support a people's initiative

"What shall we do? I don't want to speak in behalf of the en banc, but so far as I'm concerned, I will dismiss the petition," said Borra, echoing the senators who had pointed out that the Comelec was "permanently enjoined" by the Supreme Court from entertaining any petitions.

Once the people's initiative reaches a dead end, Pimentel predicted, the President's allies would revert to the House-initiated constituent assembly to amend the Charter.

"With the people's initiative encountering insurmountable legal and procedural obstacles, it's conceivable that they just might use the Con-Ass again," he said.

Con-Ass was temporarily shelved after the opposition said it had the numbers to block it.

Vice President Noli de Castro, meanwhile, yesterday warned proponents of the people's initiative not to subvert the process but to follow the true will of the people. With Cynthia D. Balana.

She is most unpopular, but GMA is undaunted

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO IS the most unpopular Chief Executive of the last two decades, but her aides have stressed that their boss does not care if the public liked former Presidents Corazon Aquino, Fidel V. Ramos and Joseph Estrada.

"Surveys that dwell on the political fate of the President do not faze her," said Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, repeating the mantra he has been saying since Ms Arroyo's satisfaction rating took a deep plunge from which it has yet to recover.

Social Weather Stations chief Mahar Mangahas, in a statement, said President Arroyo was "the least popular of the four presidents in the two decades since opinion polls have been regularly published," being the only state leader with a negative satisfaction rating.

In his footnotes, Mangahas said: "In Filipino as well as in English, 'satisfaction' is a better grade than 'approval.'"

Unusual route

Since "her unusual but legal (as ruled by the Supreme Court) route to the Presidency," Mangabas noted that the President received her first negative rating in early 2003 when she ordered Philippine troops to join the US-backed Coalition of the Willing in Iraq.

But her rating bounced back in the runup to the 2004 elections which she won "with the narrowest point margin since independence in 1946," according to Mangahas

But the President's allies in Congress yesterday tore into that survey, saying it was inaccurate.

Parañaque City Rep. Eduardo Zialcita dismissed the survey as improbable since the opposition had failed repeatedly to agitate the people enough to form a critical mass that would force her to resign.

Isabela Rep. Rodito Albano said the survey did not reflect the public sentiment against extraconstitutional moves to oust the President.

Facing the issue

"Why will the SWS force the issue of the President's ouster when the people have seen how the anti-Arroyo forces had failed miserably to agitate the people at the height of the Hello Garci scandal?" said Zialcita, referring to the wiretapping controversy alleging cheating by the President in the May 2004 election.

He also said the planned withdrawal of support from Ms Arroyo by elements of the Army Scout Rangers, the Marines and the PNP Special Action Force last Peb. 24 lacked popular support.

"At the height of their oust-GMA moves, they lost the momentum and failed to generate mass support. What more now, when the economy is improving along with the peace and order," Zialcita said.

Albano said the SWS survey did not reflect the situation on the ground, particularly in the provinces.

"The survey does not reflect the true sentiments of our constituents in the provinces. In isabela alone, our bishops are one with the people in supporting the Arroyo leadership," he said. With Norman Bordadora

Cha-cha groups cry harassment

By Norman Bordadora and Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

ONE OF THE ORGANIZATIONS SPEARheading the campaign for a people's initiative in amending the Constitution yesterday accused local authorities in the opposition strongholds of San Juan and Makati City of harassing and preventing its volunteers from gathering signatures, which it claims to have reached more than eight million nationwide.

Lawyer Raul Lambino, spokesman for Sigaw ng Bayan and a member of the Malacañang-appointed Constitutional Commission that drafted a proposed new Charter last year, said he had received complaints that volunteers distributing forms in San Juan and Makati were stopped from gathering signatures in those places last weekend.

"This is another act of desperation on the part of some politicians who think that they can overturn the irreversible momentum of Charter change through their arm-twisting tactics," Lambino said.

San Juan's mayor is JV Ejercito, son of former President Joseph Estrada, while the mayor of Makari is Jejomar Binay, one of the leaders of the United Opposition. Both are vocal critics of Ms Arroyo and her moves to amend the Constitution and shift to a new form of government with a unicameral parliament.

Lambino denied reports that people were made to sign blank forms to gather a greater number of signatories, which he claimed to have reached more than eight million nationwide.

Lambino's claim of harassment came as San Juan's Municipal Council passed a resolution opposing constitutional amendments via a people's initiative and Ejercito once more assailed what he described a rampant "signature-buying."

Meanwhile, officials in La Trinidad, Benguet, demanded that the signature campaign in the province's 13 towns and 140 barangays be declared "null and void" because residents were asked to sign forms without being informed of the issues.

"We do not recognize the process that was conducted," Provincial Board Member Aloysius Kato said. "We in the province have discussed all issues openly but how come, in this issue of Charaer change, no discussions were done?" With Delmor Cariño, PDI Northern Luson Bureau

TWO BIRTHDAY CAKES, WISHES for her peace of mind and for less politics, hopes for her happiness, and a seemingly overpowering people's initiative-what more could a woman turning 59 ask for?

President Macapagal-Arroyo found herself gifted with two creamy delights-one decorated Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said Ms Arroyo had Just thanked her ministers after the Palace meeting when they broke into the "Happy Birthday" song and brought out a Häagen Dazs coffee ice cream cake with carnations.

"Peace of mind and accomplishment of the work she started" was the Cabinet's birthday wish for Ms Arroyo, Bunye said. It was the second cake she got co-founder of the President's own party Kabalikat ng Malayang Pilipino (Kampi).

No sideline role for Mike

Esposo drew a contrast between the First Gentleman and the former First Lady, saying that "Mike antagonizes while Imelda charms."

He also said the unbridled support Mike and Imelda gave their spouses' political ambitions contributed to their respective partners' "staying power."

"Imelda knows how to defuse tension, but then she was not running the backroom. Mike is operational," Esposo said. "He forms alliances, he recruits people, he talks to the generals and these are Important to the President."

But Mike never planned to stay in the sidelines, according to Esposo, citing the meetings he had with the Arroyos when they were mapping out her presidential plans in 1998.

Mike does talking

Esposo said he was invited to join Ms Arroyo's group by her classmate, Cherry Zapanta, in 1996, after Ms Arroyo was reelected senator.

The initial plan was for Esposo to head a GMA-for-president media bureau.

Even in the first meetings, Esposo said Mike already "did much of the talking" about the jockeying for positions in the Laban ng Demokratikong Pilipino. Mike was worried that his wife might not make it as standard-bearer of the LDP in 1998, Esposo said.

To help Ms Arroyo's presidential plans, the group founded Kampi and registered it with the Commission on Elections in 1997. Ms Arroyo was the first party president, with Margarita Cojuangeo, Amado Bagatsing and Luis Santos as vice presidents and Emigdio Tanjuatco as secretary general.

In one meeting, Esposo said, Ms Arroyo was bristling over a "white paper" supposedly sent to LDP mayors and vice mayors, apparently to torpedo her chances of being the party's standard-bearer in 1998.

"Gloria herself brought a copy of the white paper. I glanced through it. There were names. It was supposed to be her sex life from way back during Georgetown days, It was very vicious.

fight back," Esposo said.

"Mike couldn't believe it also, but it was written in such a way that there was a semblance of credibility." Esposo said. The group was in a bind.

"It was a no-win situation. It was not yet in media, we could not answer it. If we went proactive, we may just be attracting curiosity and attention," he said.

Deferred to husband

The decision was to let her "offset the issue without directly attacking it," such as by projecting herself as a pious woman who went on regular retreats with nuns, Esposo said.

We also agreed that we should not be distracted from our main goal, which was how to stop (for-

She was vexed and had wanted to mer movie actor Joseph) Estrada," Esposo said.

Ms Arroyo did win in 1998 but as vice president.

According to Salgado, Ms Arroyo always deferred to the First Gentleman, even against her father's wishes, such as her decision to run for senator under the LDP in 1995, instead of under the Liberal Party, with which their father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, had been affiliated.

Fierce defender

could buy one "because Gioria wants a Cartier," Salgado recalled.

Ms Arroyo would also be her husband's fiercest defender, Salgado said.

In the early 1990s, when she was vice governor of Pampanga, Salgado said she told Ms Arroyo, who was then with a Senate committee overseeing the Mt. Pinatubo Commission, about a complaint from a Pampanga official that Mike was "meddling" in the bidding for projects to rehabilitate the lahar-ravaged province.

"When he closed his eyes at noon, he waited for those dear to him to come and waited for the priest to finish the last rites. Then he went. There was no struggle, he went very peacefully," the senator said in a phone interview.

"As he was a peaceful man in life so he went peacefully in death," she said.

The wake will be held at the Madrigal residence. He will be buried at the family mausoleum at the Madrigal Center in Ala-

TV show and made the Gabriela Women's Party the beneficiary of a P1-million prize, bucked the idea of running for a seat in the House of Representatives in 2007, possibly as a nominee of the militant women's party-list group.

"I might lose time for my love life. I'm just here to help out, but that's not an obligation," she said.

Clad in white, the 36-year-old Reeves (Janet Direcho Duterte in real life) yesterday traveled to the House to visit the so-called Batasan 5.

The five militant party-list lawmakers are suspected of rebellion and have been holed up at the House for more than a month now to clude arrest.

"Their invitation for me to be here is a huge honor," Reeves said in Filipino at the site of Anakpawis Rep. Crispin Beltran's photo exhibit at the House's north wing, where she met with Gabriela Rep. Liza Maza, Bayan Muna Representatives Satur Ocampo, Teodoro Casiño and Joel Virador, and Anakpawis Rep. Rafael Mariano

Beltran, himself charged with rebellion, is detained at Camp Crame.

'Escort girl'

Reeves, a confessed "escort girl," and Gabriela have a history together.

In August 2004, Gabriela backed Reeves against brickbats from politicians and certain members of the media after she told a congressional inquiry into the "escort" trade that lawmakers were among her clients.

And Reeves has not forgotten, saying that when she was in need of support and assistance, the women's group was there for her.

"I understand their cause and I am in full support of Gabriela," she said. "And perhaps, even if I don't ask about these things, I know what they are fighting for because I wouldn't be brought here by Congresswoman Maza if we're not of the same views."

Reeves scored points among "Pinoy Big Brother" viewers for her candid remarks and down-to-earth behavior.

At one point, when actor Rustom Padilla was about to reveal that he was gay, Reeves told him to hold the thought and went to relieve herself behind a bush.

"Even if I don't have a degree, I know how to be a good person," Reeves said.

Told that President Macapagal-Arroyo would be marking a birthday today, Reeves wished her a happy one and said; "I wish that she would open her heart and understand others."

No fear

It appears that Reeves's militant friends may stay inside the House without fear of being arrested even when Congress goes on recess tomorrow,

"I have a personal decision that when Congress goes into recess on April 6, it will continue to extend the protection of the House of Representatives [to the Batasan 5] until such time that the preliminary investigation is completed," Speaker Jose de Venecia was quoted as telling representatives of the Asian Peasant Coalition (APC) on Monday evening.

Solons file 2 new perjury charges vs Garcillano

By DJ Yap

FORMER ELECTION COMMISsioner Virgilio Garcillano has been charged anew with submitting a fake passport and perjuring himself during the House committee hearings into the "Hello Garci" scandal.

Sixteen congressmen led by Cavite Rep. Gilbert Remulla yesterday filed 21 counts of perjury and falsification of public documents and two counts of violation of the Passport Act against Garcillano in the Quezon City prosecutor's office. Similar charges were filed against Garcillano two weeks ago by Sen.

House members, on the strength of a Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) report indicating the passport he had submitted was fake.

Remulia said the latest charges were separate from the earlier complaint but were based on the

We are citing specific instances in which Garci perjured himself. This is much more detailed than the earlier complaint," he said at a press conference held an hour before the filing.

Lawyer Alex Avisado Jr. said it was up to the respondent Garcillano to move for the consolidation of both complaints for convenience.

identified each of the 21 times Garcillano allegedly lied to the House committees when he said he never left the country after the "Hello Garci" wiretap controversy broke out in June 2005.

The wiretaps purportedly con-tained his voice and that of President Macapagal-Arroyo discussing her votes in the May 2004 elections.

But Laguna Rep. Justin Chipeco said the legislators were not too concerned about whether Garcillano had left or not, but whether there was an attempt by the administration to cover this up.

"The real issue is if there was a cov-

Parafiaque City Rep. Rollo Golez said there was an emerging pattern in the administration's response to the scandal: Fake CDs, fake passport and fake people's initiative.

To which the other representatives added: "And fake president." Attached to the 19-page complaint were transcripts of the House inquiry in which Garcillano testified, as well as a copy of the BSP report which said that one of the passports he had submitted for examiof a note verbale issued by Singapore's Ministry of Poreign Affairs on Aug. 31, 2005, stating that Garcillano landed in the city-state on July 14 aboard a Learjet 35 and departed the following day.

If convicted, Garcillano could face a maximum prison term of 30 years and a fine of up to P300,000, lawyers said.

Perjury cames a prison term of from four to six months to six months to two years and four months, while falsification of documents carries a term of six to 12 years.

The complainant also had a copy of six to 15 years, and a fine of P60,000 to P150,000.

The other complainants were Representatives Loretta Ann Rosales, Plorencio Noel, Lorenzo Tañada III. Alfonso Umali Jr., Renato Magtubo and Risa Hontiveros-Baraquel.

Representatives Rolex Suplico, Antonino-Custodio, Dariene Teodoro Casiño, Mujiv Hataman, Imee Marcos, Francis Escudero and Rodolfo Plaza were also among the complainants, but they were not present yesterday for the filing.

Body of Pinoy in Bahrain sea tragedy brought home

By Nikko Dizon

LOURDES BATACAN GRIPPED HER EL Shaddai handkerchief-as if it were her only link to sanity—and wiped away her tears.

Sobbing loudly in the sweltering heat, she waited for the remains of her husband, Edwin, to be released from the cargo warehouse at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (Naia).

Edwin Batacan, a 47-year-old geodetic engineer, was among the 58 people who drowned when their leisure boat sank off the coast of Bahrain in the Persian Guif, last

There were three other Filipinos among the fatalities, while seven others were among the 68 who survived.

Edwin's company had treated its employees and staff to a party on the pleasure boat, Al-dana, but the celebration turned into a tragedy.

His remains arrived at 1:30 p.m. at the Naia via Gulf Air flight GF 154.

Lourdes, 43, and her sister-in-law, Estelita Hernandez, declined to speak to the me-

It was the Batacans' only child, 12year-old Edric-eyes red and puffy from crying who bravely answered a couple of questions from reporters.

That's Edric without a 'K' at the end. We came from Nueva Ecija and we're going back there," the boy, who had just graduated from elementary school; said, while holding on to his grieving mother's hand.

to escape questions from the media.

In the confines of the vehicle, mother and son cried their hearts out when they saw the crate bearing Edwin's remains being brought out from the cargo area into a waiting van.

Edwin's cousin, Julita Velasco, told reporters that he might be buried this Sunday in the family's hometown in Dupax del Sur in Nueva Vizcaya.

"He was very kind. He was a responsible father," Julita said.

Despite being an overseas Filipino worker for many years, Edwin, the eldest in the family, was unable to save enough money because he had sent his younger siblings to school, the cousin added.

One of his sisters is now living in the United States, while a sister and a brother are immigrants in Canada.

Edwin continued to work overseas to provide for his own family, Julita said.

He had been working in Bahrain for the last two years when tragedy struck. "She (Lourdes) said she might go back to Hong Kong or Cyprus to work again so that their son would be able to continue his studies." Julita said. Lourdes used to work as a domestic helper in the former British colony, she added.

IN THE MARCH 31 ISSUE, a front-page story-"UP tops bar exams again; JDV niece is No. 1"-misstated the place where the In-QUIRIN interviewed bar topnotcher Joan de Venecia. De Venecia was interviewed at the Court of Appeals—not at Market! Market!

IN THE APRIL 3 issue, a story on Page A10—"Mayor, others charged in alleged drug overprice"—misstated that Romulo Rodriguez Jr. is the mayor of Cagayan de Oro City. The mayor of Cagayan de Oro is Vicente Emano. Rodriguez used to be the mayor of Gingoog City, a position now occupied by Ruth de Lara-Guingona.

IN THE APRIL 3 ISSUE, a story on Page A3-"Filipino's dreams died in Bahrain - erroneously stated that Edwin Batacan, one of those who drowned in the sinking of a luxury boat in Bahrain, was a geodetic engineer. Baracan was a geodetic engineering graduate but was not a licensed geodetic engineer, his wife said.

IN THE APRIL 3 ISSUE, a photo caption on Page A26 stated erroneously the occupation of honest airport employee Jerry Dalit. Dalit is a security guard—not a policeman.

IN YESTERDAY'S ISSUE, a photo caption on the front page misstated the school from which the Hipolito triplets graduated with honors. Gerome, Germond and Geroni Hipolito graduated from the Ponciano Bernardo High School—not the Ponciano Bernardo Elementary School.

IN YESTERDAY'S ISSUE, a photo caption on the front page identified erroneously the man seated beside management consultant Hermenegildo Estrella Jr. during the Senate inquiry into the wiretapping controversy. The person beside Estrella is Hadji Abdullah Dalldig, provincial chair of Namfrel Lanao del Sur during the 2004 elections—not Comelec Commissioner Resurreccion Borra.

IN YESTERDAY'S ISSUE, a front-page story-"Borra says cheating marred 2004 polls"-misstated that President Macapagal-Arroyo was impeached, and that her allies in the House of Representatives killed the impeachment process on a technicality in September 2005. Ms Arroya was never impeached. Last September, the House dismissed the impeachment complaint against the President,

IN THE SAME STORY, the discrepancy between the number of Basilan precincts counted by Namfrel and those counted by Congress was misstated. Namfrel counted 361 precincts, while Congress counted 600 precincts, an increase of 66.20 percent, not 1.7 percent.

576 STOPAD BRIDGES GOMPL MONTHS AHEAD OF SCHE

TULAY NG PANGULO SA SZOPAD - "BRIDGES OF HOPE"

The 526 steel bridges programmed and implemented in the Special Zone for Peace and Development (SZOPAD) have been fully completed nine months ahead of schedule and with steel bridge materials savings good for 50 more bridges.

This was the report to President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo of DPWH Secretary Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., Chairman of the President's Bridge Program (PBP), and PBP Executive Director Emil Sadain who joined the President on her trip to Palawan.

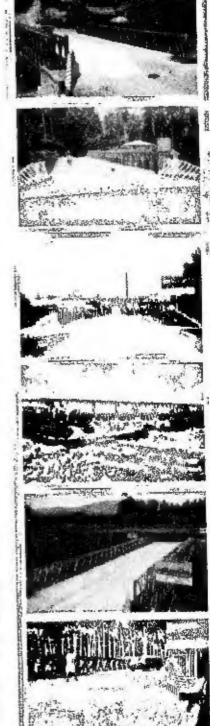

A.U.K. government assisted bridge project under the President's Bridge Program, the SZOPAD steel bridges which cover the entire island of Mindanao including Palawan was started in December 2001 in response to the demand of provinces and cities neighboring the ARMM Region. Some 526 SZOPAD "Bridges of Hope" were programmed to provide the residents an increase in access to government services and upgrade their standard of living through better economic opportunities.

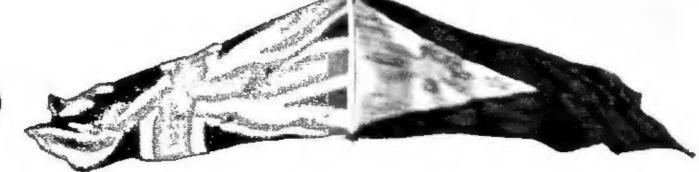

Secretary Ebdane, Jr., underscored that: "The PBP is one responsive program of the government that has been implemented with fidelity to time target and costing. Since it started, it has proceeded with no cost overruns incurred, accomplished ahead of schedule and with bridge materials savings good for 50 more bridges,"

President Fidel V. Ramos started the PBP as a parallel intervention to fast track infrastructure, particularly in bridging development of newly opened The program areas for agricultural production. continued under President Estrada and speedily progressed under President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's stewardship.

The prefabricated modular steel bridging for the PBP is supplied by Mabey & Johnson, the UK's sole manufacturer of modular steel panel bridge systems. It uses the most advanced state-of-the-art robotic processes to produce a permanent and maintenance-free bridge product to the highest quality standards.

The implementation of PBP is now under the able Chairmanship of DPWH Secretary Hermogenes Ebdane, Ir. who has accelerated the program with remarkable accomplishment.

Antiterror bill OKd; no death penalty

By Norman Bordadora

RUSHING IT'S WORK BEFORE THE Holy Week break, the House of Representatives last night approved on second reading the antiterror bill defining and penalizing terrorist acts.

One of the major amendments provides that an act of terror will no longer be punished with death, as proposed in many previous versions of the legislation since the Sept. 11, 2001 terror attack on the US.

Those found guilty of terrorism will be meted out life imprisonment and fines ranging from P5 million to P10 million.

After a period of amendments, the House plenary voting viva voce approved the capital punishment. Their maximum penalty would be life imprisonment. in part as the "premeditated, threatened or actual use of violence or force or any other means that deliberately tend to cause or actually cause massive harm to persons."

"It's good as passed," said Albay Rep. Edcel Lagman, one of those who sponsored the bill on the floor last night.

The only thing still to be done is a nominal voting that the bill will go through on third and final reading, which is considered a mere formality.

Lagman added that those who commit heinous crimes, such as multiple murder in the furtherance of terrorism, would also no longer be penalized with setter - the set of whatlandship

Under the bill, terrorism is committed by "any person or group of persons ... who with intent to create or sow danger, panic, fear or chaos to the general public or segment thereof, or to coerce or intimidate the government to do or to refrain from doing an act through premeditated, threatened, or actual use of force, violence or other means of destruction, commits the following acts: 1) Threatening or causing death or serious bodily harm;

2) Threatening or causing serous risk to health or safety of the public or any segment of the public;

3) Threatening or causing substantial damage or wanton destruction or resorting to arson on critical infrastructure or property, private or public; 4) Causing serious or unlawful interference with a serious unlawful disruption of essential service.

Other acts that may be categorized as in pursuit of terrorism include hijacking, kidnapping or threatening to kidnap, killing an internationally protected person, attacking or threatening to attack cyberspace, willfully destroying the environment and natural resources, unlawfully processing chemical, biological, radiological or nuclear agents, and unlawfully processing explosives and projectiles.

DFA doubts Somalia hijacking report

By Volt Contreras

THE DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFfairs (DPA) yesterday raised doubts about media reports that armed pirates had hijacked an oil tanker off the coast of Somalia on March 29 and were holding its crewmembers-including 19 Pilipinos-for ransom.

DPA spokesman Gilberto Asuque said the Philippine Embassy in Nalrobi, Kenya (which also covers Somalia), as well as the United Nations security officials in the region, did not receive any report on the alleged incident.

Asugue was quoting an April 3 communication from Philippine Charge d'Affaires in Nairobi Bernarditas Müller, who had made inquiries with Joe Gordon, chief security adviser of the UN Field Security Coordination Office in Somalia.

Muller also noted that even the Nairobi media had "no news" of the alleged hijacking, Asuque told reporters.

At the same time, he said CHEd was expanding its student financial assistance program, or the "Study Now Pay Later" plan, after Malacañang earmarked P250 million for it.

He said the money would be divided as follows: P100 million for Catholic Education Association of the Philippines, P100 million for the Philippine Association of Colleges and Universities. million for the Association of Christian Schools Colleges and Universities and P20 million for the Philippine Associaof Private tion Schools, Colleges and Universities.

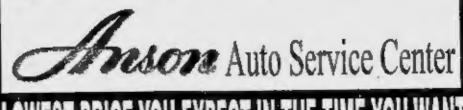

These organiza tions will pick, test and screen deserving beneficiaries of the funds, Puno said.

"The CHEd has also worked out ways to ensure that the loans shall be paid accordingly by the beneficiaries after graduation through a new monitoring scheme. This shall be given top priority to ensure the continuity of the program, which will be available to future college freshmen students," Puno said.

He said the program was "designed to promote democradization of access to education opportunities in the tertiary level to poor but deserving students." Alcuin Papa

TCL SU 6 Years of Val

MESSAGE

We are happy to mark our 6th year in the Philippines as TCL gains increasing acceptance emeng Filipino households. It has not been an easy road for the brend but I must say that every step of collective hard work and perseverance was worth it!

TCL opens a new life for all who aspire to have the best of entertainment technology in their homes: state-of-the art talevision sets meant to be conveniently enjoyed by every member of the family. Our high technology Colored TV, LCD, Plasma, Slim and Flat TVs with interesting features and in starso, are at par with today's international standards.

We are most especially grateful to our dealers for their invaluable support. Indeed, their concerted individual efforts have paved the way for TCL's phenomenal entry into the local market as a preferred brand to carry.

Suffice it to say that our brand's significant and meaningful success in the country continues to inspire TCL in bringing to you only the best possibilities that we can offer. 6 years and beyond!

President TCL SUN INC.

MESSAGE

It is an honor for me to be with TCL Sun Inc. and a great pleasure to be part of its dynamic team in the Philippines. What the brand has achieved thus far, symbolizes the triumph of the human spirit to aim for great possibilities by nurturing good values and inherent strengths within the company.

On its 6th year, TCL shares with Filipino households its pession for quality innovations that put its name among the world's best in home entertainment and lifestyle conveniences. I am glad to note that the brand has become one of the top players in the local TV industry and provides the much-sought after "value for money" with its high quality and affordability.

I wish TCi, more success in its future endeavors as we hope for the continued support of our dealers and the Filipino people.

Mabuhay!

XIADDONG WU

Executive Vice President TCL SUN INC.

MESSART

On its 6th enriversary, nothing can be farther from the truth that TCL has indeed arrived here in the Philippines. After initially serving as company president until my new assignment in TCL Corporation Overseas SBU two years ago, I em pleased to see good signs of a brighter future for the brand.

TCL has become the most successful producer and provider of electronic products with abundant potential as one of the leading names in the global TV market. Since TGL Overseas SBU is tasked to be the main force to explore these overseas markets, we are determined to pursue those dreams by working for their realization through high quality research and design technology.

As we commemorate 8 years of brand presence in the Philippines, we are working to bring more support locally through a diversified quality product line-up that will endear TCL closer to our customers through values, employment opportunities and benefits for society.

Our special bhanks for your wholehearted supports

Moving Forward

The world does not run out of success stories. TCL's emergence as the global brand that it is today is made even more formidable considering its early beginnings as a business enterprise of cassette production back in the mid 80's.

Looking back, TCL has always been marching forward and top management can only be grateful for all the opportunities that have come its way. Committed to expand internationally, it bought out two reputed brands, Germany's "Schneider" in 2002 and GO-Video in 2003, followed by yet another breakthrough, its joint venture with Thomson Electronics in France.

The company is, indeed, a major international competitive player with Thomson in Europe, RCA in U.S.A. and TCL in Asia in its fold.

The Philippines is regarded as a key leadership market for TCL. Six years of phenomenal growth has brought it inside the elite circle of the country's top performers in the TV market, clinching a record of strong dealers' support and gaining Filipino consumers' acceptance.

TCL's entry into the top 5 local TV market is indeed remarkable considering that this was achieved in a short period of 5 years. Last year alone, it achieved 90% attainment of its own target and close to 40% growth over its previous year's performance. That it survived the recent economic and political uncertainties, speaks a lot of its tenacity, indicating that indeed, TCL in the Philippines is on its way up the leadership ladder.

Spirit of Innovations in Emerging Markets

TCL recognizes the ability to create innovations via high technology. It is committed to provide customers with diversified products internationally, putting hundreds of new models every year in many parts of the globe. In recent years, TCL has produced Plasma TVs, LCD-DVD TVs, Satellite TV sets, Slim Flat TVs, digital video and digital camera, many of which are ahead of similar products: that are out in the market. In 2004, TCL launched the world's lightest, slimmest and biggest DLP TV.

Taking pride in its hard-earned stature as a top television brand in the country, TCL is determined to bring its diversity right littre in the Philippines. The Slim/Flat TV with its outstanding features are Ideal for Filipino households who want more from their home entertainment sets. One can't go arong with the brand's LCD, Plasma and Satellite TVs and digital camera with prices that are music to the ears. TCL effers the advantage of affordability and good service for their quality products.

M, INC. ue Technology

"2005 Best Operations"

Company president Alex M. Espiritu, himself an awardee as excellent overseas manager for two (2) consecutive years, takes charge of country operations together with executive vice president Xiaodong Wu, to guide and ensure efficient company management. Both executives are elated over the many recognitions that have been bestowed upon TCL Sun Inc.

The "2005 Best Operations" Award is a solid testimony to the distinguished performance of the brand in the Philippines, besting 16 other countries overseas. It shows how its mother company appreciates the significant contribution that TCL in this part of Asia makes to achieve its averall global performance by generating commendable sales, adhering to company policies and living up to its ideals, visions and corporate commitments.

Individual sales and marketing executives have likewise been receiving awards and commendations from TCL's headquarters, boosting their drive to excel and work together as a dynamic team.

After all, creating a world class corporation is not just about high technology and excellent products. It is also about good people within the organization, harnessing their capabilities, encouraging their own dreams and more importantly, recognizing their potentials to grow and become excellent leaders in their own right.

TCL-Thomson Electronics Market Business Center (TTE EMBC) Support Inspires

TTE EMBC is the main force for exploring overseas markets. It is constantly working on the process of making dreams turn into innovations and reality to build up TCL's international image. By improving integrated management skills and resources, TTE EMBC has constructed a global and highly efficient supply chain system and marketing service net.

TTE EMBC's support for local bases is integral to the worldwide success of TCL. It works hand in hand with local operations in exploring possibilities and cutching opportunities that will inspire the entire corporate team to greater heights.

Former president Emmanuel T. Valencia, now business development director for TCL Corporation Overseas SBU, reiterates the strong emphasis of facilitating R&D, manufacturing, sales and service globalization, as the right way for TCL products to achieve a world standard, and deliver the TCL brand values and benefits to consumers successfully.

TCL TV: "My New Favourite"

Being an emerging leader brings TCL closer to the consciousness of an enlightened Filipino cestomer. At the rate the brand is gaining wider acceptance and getting increasing support from existing and new dealers, TCL is fast becoming known as "My New Favourite". Interesting features come with every product for an equally interesting, real-life entertainment experience. It is reflective of the value technology that has been brought in locally for six solid years.

A Bright Look Into the Future

In se short a time, it can be said that TCL has made the right moves and taken positive strides to find its place in the sun.

TCL has many stories to tell in all the many countries where it operates. But perhaps, the Philippine success story of diligent work, management teamwork and strong adherence to value technology is a more endearing story because it is closer to home.

On its 6th anniversary, expect more innovations, more value benefits and more exciting developments as TCL welcomes everybody to experience a new life!

Lost referendum

HAILAND IS IN SHOCK. AS THE RESULTS OF THE parliamentary elections called by Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra to renew his mandate came in, it became clear that the boycott and abstention movement had succeeded. The results exceeded even the wildest expectations of oppositionists, according to the Thai newspaper The Nation. Thai election rules require candidates in uncontested districts to EDITORIAL achieve at least 20 percent of the vote to enter parliament. The boycott resulted in many seats remaining unfilled and so the new parliament cannot convene. Thaksin has neither a mandate nor a parliament to re-elect him prime minister. Follow-up elections now have to take place to fill those empty seats.

Analysts say several factors contributed to the success of the boycott campaign and the failure of Thaksin's confidence in both the machinery of his party and his support in the countryside. The first was the relentiess expressions of people power in Bangkok which remained peaceful to the end. The second was that a well-organized publicity stunt, like Thaksin going to an open market to mingle with the electorate, got derailed by indignant citizens shouting "Thaksin, get out!" The third was a relatively small (by opposition standards) administration-organized rally to besiege the offices of The Nation, which galvanized the Thai media and the public. The fourth was another raily that evening in which Thaksin's supporters pelted oppositionists with rotten eggs and stones, in marked contrast to the peaceful and organized protests of the opposition. Finally, last Sunday, election day, a noted academic defiantly tore up his ballot in full view of the cameras, emboldening other Thais to do the same. The professor was arrested and put in jail.

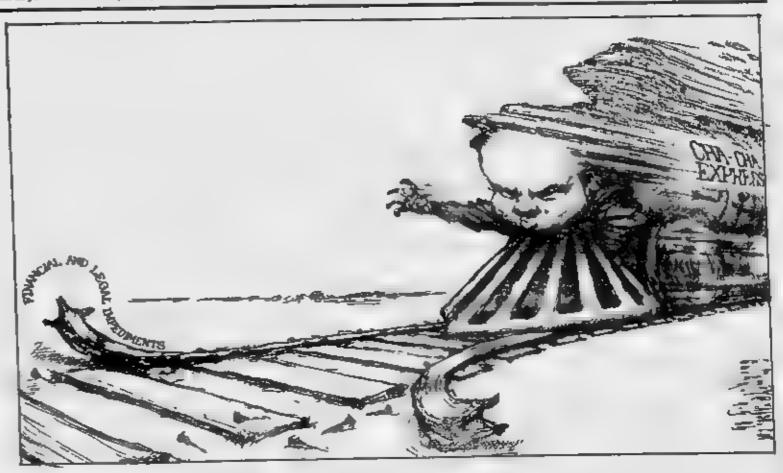

Still, Thaksin remains defiant, claiming 16 million votes for his party (3 million less than what the party got in the previous election) versus the 10 million who abstained He had earlier vowed to step down if his party failed to obtain 50 percent of the vote. On Monday night, he declared that he had achieved that percentage. And though his parliamentary majority was down to 349 seats from 377 seats last year, he defiantly pointed out that he retains a healthy majority. The problem is that Thailand's Constitution requires all the seats in the House of Representatives (the lower house of Thailand's bicameral parliament) to be filled before parliament can

But Thaksin's bravura can't overshadow what has put Thailand in shock: not only have so many voted essentially for "none of the above" but so few of Thaksin's candidates got more votes than the negative votes (Thais have an option to check "no vote" on their ballots, which is tantamount to "none of the above" or abstention or boycott since not voting is a crime). In Bangkok, for example, only nine of Thaksin's candidates got more votes than the negative votes: 51 percent of Bangkok voters checked the "no vote" box on their ballots.

Thaksin has proposed the creation of a "reconciliation commission" to help find a solution to the parliamentary impasse. The panel would be composed of three former presidents of parliament, three former Supreme Court presidents, three former prime ministers and rectors of state universities. Thaksin says he will resign if the commission recommends that he do so to restore national unity. He has even proposed four potential successors. At the same time, Thaksin continues to make defiant 'statements, referring to the Bush-Gore fight in the United States, and asking, "Tell me how the country would be better off without me. There must be good reasons for me to stay or quit. The 16 million should be told how the country will be reconciled if I step down." Still, Thaksın might step down since he has lost what was billed as a referendum on his government and failed to get the new mandate he wanted. If, for example, in the contested parliamentary seats, oppositionists prevent is any candidate from achieving 20 percent, he would be hard put to justify the formation of a government. Then the crisis will continue, and deepen. Which leads to the question: Will he go peacefully, or not?

Back to the drawing board for PCSO on STL

HERE'S BAD NEWS FOR LOCAL GOVERNment officials and employees, policemen and soldiers. Contrary to what has been implied in statements of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO), they won't get a single centavo, personally, from the share of local government units (LGUs) from the income of the small town lottery (STL). The LGU shares, said lawyers Paul Lentejas, PCSO spokesperson and legal consultant, and Lauro Patiag, manager of the legal department, are supposed to be spent for their charity projects. It would be illegal to use them to give higher salaries or allowances, they said at the Kapihan sa Manila last Monday.

What this means is that they would not benefit directly from STL and would still be susceptible to bribes from justing lords to look the other way or even work for them when they resume parallel jueteng operations. Those who would benefit are the jueteng lords, their cobradores and cabos who would be employed but still be under the influence of their old bosses, the gambling operators, and those who would accept the bribes In other words, we would be back where we started: illegal jueteng would continue to corrupt government personnel, now including officials of the PCSO who would decide whom to bless with STL franchises. And in most cases, they would be run by the same justeng lords using dummies. In fact, dummies may not even be necessary because under the PCSO rules, jueteng lords are not forbidden from applying for franchises. They have the advantage over others, too, because they have the experience and the capital (at least P15 million) to operate in a city or municipality. The only difference is that justeng has been legalized and the gambling lords have been given a cover for their colorum jueteng operations.

A cobrador can be collecting bets for STL and at the same time collecting for justing. If caught, he can claim he is working for STL and has the identification card to support it. In other words, the PCSO has just rewarded the recidivist lawbreakers, the jueteng lords, with le-

Not only that, colorum jueteng can easily eat into the earnings of STL or even kill it. In the first place, jueteng has only 37 numbers to choose from while STL has 40, and so the chances of winning is bigger in jueteng. The minimum bet for STL is 50 centavos, but for jueteng it is only 25 centavos. And instead of having only three STL draws a day, justeing can have four or more.

Also, juereng can offer bigger prizes. Its draws are made in secret or not at all, and the operator just chooses the combination with the smallest bet, so he can afford to give bigger prizes. Or the cobradores can push harder for justeng instead of STL.

What I am saying is that STL, as formulated by the PCSO, won't kill jueteng which is the justification for STL. The latter was proposed by anti-jueteng czar Puerto Princesa Mayor Edward Hagedom to provide employment to the thousands of people who would be made jobless by the eradication of jueteng. His proposal was endorsed by the mayors and governors who were under the impression that the policemen and LGU personnel who were being bribed by jueteng lords would be legally given commissions by STL

That is not correct, according to Lentejas and Panag. The PCSO management shot down Hagedorn's original proposal, for reasons people with dirty minds have already guessed. Washing his hands of the STL business, Hage dorn went home disappointed because he would lose face with his fellow mayors who thought they would be the ones operating STL. President Macapagal-Arroyo followed him to Puerto Princesa and asked him to serve as antijueteng czar again, but Hagedorn was sull hurting and staying away as of Monday.

I had lunch with Interior Secretary Ronaldo Puno last Saturday and I told him about Hagedorn's original proposal. He said it was a good idea but it was the first time he heard of it. I said it had been shot down by the PCSO. He said he would talk to Hagedorn and endorse it.

Can the PCSO still change its rules? Lentejas and Pating said, "Of course. After all, STL is still experimental and will be adjusted as needed."

There is another good reason why STL should be run by the LGUs and not by private franchise holders, a.k.a. the old jueteng lords. Only a portion of the collections from the numbers game go back to the economy of the city or municipality, in the form of commissions to the cobradores and cabos, the shares of the LGU and the police, etc. But at least a third goes to the operator who takes it out of the municipality's economy and deposits it in the bank or spends it elsewhere. In the case of franchise holders who are balikbayans, like the ones in Quezon City, they would even take their profits out of the Philippines.

Remember that there are at least three draws daily. So almost one whole day's income from STL would be taken out of the local economy daily. Multiply that by 7 days a week, 30 days a month, 365 days a year, times the number of cities and municipalities with STL, and that would add up to hundreds of billions of pesos siphoned out of the economy. In no time at all, the economy would be deprived of capi-

On the other hand, if LGUs operate STL, all the collections would go back to the people in the form of social services, wages, commissions, etc., and hence back to the economy. I think the PCSO should go back to the drawing board.

Choices

I SAW A COUPLE OF TV PROGRAMS WHERE the panel representing the camp opposing Charter change exhorted the voters to defend their right to choose their leader. In a parliamentary system, they said, the voters will no longer directly choose their prime minister, only the members of Parliament will. Only in a presidential system do the voters directly vote for their president. That is silly, and shows only what's wrong with Cha-cha in the first place. The real choice is not between a parliamentary system and a presidential system, it is between dictatorship and democracy. The real choice is not between directly voting for a president or voting indirectly for a prime minister, the real choice is between being able to vote or not being able to vote at all-or what is but the same thing, between having one's vote counted and not having one's vote counted at all. The real choice is not which type of system responds more to the citizens' needs, it is which leaders the citizens want: those they voted for or those who are merely imposing themselves on them. If you do not have elections where your votes are counted, it doesn't master a hoot whether you have a presidential system or a parliamentary one. Neither is a democracy, both are a tyranny. Your voice will not be heard, your need will not be met. Perdinand Marcos had a presidential and parliamentary system at the same time during martial law (he was both president and prime minister), which is what Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo also wants, and no one seriously asked then whether we were under a presidential or parliamentary system. Everyone knew we were under a dictatorship. Fake elections are as much a forcible wresting of power, or an outright coup, as martial lave. You have fake elections, the only choice that presents itself to you is whether you are going to exert yourself to oust the unuper or be a damm fool and tolerate her.

Lest we forget, that is the root of the problem, for which Cha-cha is being topted as the answer. We have a crisis of government because, as the Marines and Navy have been saying for some time now (and they ought to know because they were ordered to do it), the current occupant of Malacahang rigged the elections in Muslim Mindanao. For saying which, they have been gagged generally and several of them have been court-martialed. We have a crisis of government because, as every Filipino knows, GMA called up Virgilio Garcillano in the middle of the counting of ballots to demand that she win by a margin of at least one million votes. Which has since become the National Ringtone, "Hello Garci."

You have an election for prime minister and the members of parliament where the Comelec counts only the votes produced by one person or group of persons (look at the electoral returns from as far apart as Pampanga and Tawi-Tawi and see if they were not tabulated by only one hand, or group of hands), you do not have a parliamentary system, you have a dictatorship. You have an election for president and the members of the Senate and House of Representatives where the Comelec counts only the votes produced by one dog or group of dogs (look at the thumbprints in some of those same electoral forms, and see if they were made by human fingers), you do not have a presidential system, you have a joke.

The reference to Marcos and martial law is not accidental, it is deliberate. The current move to change the Constitution is a throwback to Marcos and marcial law. I recall that Marcos held several plebistites then, a couple of them having to do with Charter change and the National Assembly, though now only vaguely the way they formulated the questions. What I recall more clearly is that IBP, the acronym for interim Barasang Pambansa, which was the legislative body the public was being asked to take seriously, became more famous in reference to Ihaw Balot Plaza, which was the place poets in Tagalog went to for serious drinking.

As far as I can recall, the questions the marnal law plebiscites asked were: "Do you approve of the shift from a presidential to a parliamentary system? Do you want Marcos to exercise the powers of both president and prime minister? Do you want Marcos to be assisted in making laws by a National Assembly?" Or words to that effect.

None of them asked: "Do you approve of martial law? Do you want Marcos to lift martial law and bring back genuine elections? Do you want Marcos to not have any powers but just go away and leave us well enough alone? Do you want the citizens to simply be able to vote, never mind if they are senators and congressmen or MPs?"

The latter set was clearly the real choices, and the first completely false ones. But just to be sure, even within the narrow parameters of the questions, Marcos had the counting done by Garci's mentor, Leonardo Perez. The result was the statistical improbability of the cirizens saying "yes" by as much as 99 percent, The Philippine Daily Express promptly called it "unprecedented," and it was not entirely wrong. It had no precedent and would have no antecedent-until now. The only questions that need to be asked in a plebiscite today are: "Do you believe GMA won the elections? Do you believe she should disappear and leave us well enough alone? Do you believe we should have elections to determine a genuine president or prime minister?"

No one ever took the martial law plebisches seriously. Everyone knew the choice was not between presidential or parliamentary, it was between dictatorship and democracy. It was not between one National Assembly or two legislative houses, it was between a legitimate ruler and an flieglumate one, it was not berween local autonomy or no local autonomy, it was between Marcos or no Marcos.

Substitute "GMA" for "Marcos," and you have exactly the same thing today.

OPINION

Power vacuum after Thai polls

THAI PRIME MINISTER THAKSIN SHINAWATRA has claimed victory in last Sunday's snap election, saying that his Thai Rak Thai perty has won 57 percent of the vote in a poil he called in the hope that it would give his scandal-ridden government a fresh mandate and resolve the country's politi-

But the claim falls flat in the face of still unofficial results tending to show that he has won an empty victory. Worse, the results show a strong "no" vote that could prevent him from forming a new government, despite the fact that his party ran unopposed in 278 of the country's 400 constituencies after the main opposition parties refused to put up candidates.

Thai Party and Mahachon Party, grouped around the People's Alliance for Democracy-staged the boycott campaign within the framework of Thailand's constitutional system after their "people power" street protests demanding the resignation of Thaksin since last January had falled to dislodge him.

Thaksin has pointed out that 16 million Thans voted for his party, down from 19 million in last year's election, and that it won 349 seats, down from 377. On the face of it, Thaksin's party appears to have won a reduced parliamentary majority. But the "no" vote gave him a resounding slap and opened the door to further political instability and left a power vacuum. As one commentator said, neither side scored "a knockout blow," and the poll results continued the political stand-off.

The election results in Bangkok, the center of the street campaign to oust Thaksin, show the "no" vote (for abstention) won by 50.1 percent to 45.9 percent, and this spells trouble for Thaksin. Under the That constitution and electoral law, one party-election is allowed in unopposed constituencies, but to win a seat, the party (i.e., Thaksin's party) that fielded candidates must get

Amando Doronila

The bigger problem is that under the That constitution, all the 500 seats in the lower house must be filled before parliament can convene to elect a The opposition parties—Democrat Party, Chart prime minister and form a government within 30 days of the election. Thaksin's candidates in 38 constituencies, all opposition strongholds in Bangkok and in the south, failed to win 20 percent of the vote needed to become MPs. This means that by-elections must be called to satisfy the requirement of filling all the 500 parliamentary seats so that parliament can convene legally.

The Election Commission has warned that a new election might not produce a parliament. The results of Sunday's polls show that the opposition's boycott campaign had strong support in Bangkok, stronghold of the Democrat Party, and in the south. Thaksin received strong support in the north and northeast, which have benefited from the generous social welfare and economic assistance programs of his government.

The Thai people had little choice in the election-either they go for Thaksin's party or nothing at all-because the boycott by the main opposition parties left many constituencies with only

The election also did not give Thaksin a new cloak of legitimacy, in the wake of a corruption. scandal and accusations of abuse of power. Thaksin had called the snap election three years ahead of schedule after he came under increasing pressure from the streets starting in January this year.

Popular unrest came to a head when his family decided to sell its shares in one of Thailand's telecom groups, Shin Corp., for $1.9 billion, tax-free. Critics have accused him of tax dodging and betraying the nation by selling an important national asset to a company owned by the Singaporean government. This outraged people mostly in Bangkok and sparked demonstrations that sent up 100,000 protesters to the streets to demand his resignation.

Put to the test was the issue of whether of not a new election would resolve the crisis of legitimacy. Given Thailand's electoral system, a pertinent point is made by an academic of Chulalongkorn University that "an election usually determines the future of a country but no one's sure whether this election will decide anything." An opposition leader said the only certain outcome of the poll would be to show there were "still many problems ahead." Some commentaturs said the poil was a "seriously flawed election that really won't resolve anything."

Obviously, snap election cannot be a quick fix for political crisis generated by legitimacy issues, whether stemming from corruption or abuse of power or from accusations of cheating in elections (as in the case of the Philippine crisis). Caution must be exercised in applying the formula of Thai electoral democracy for crisis resolution.

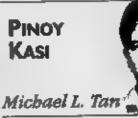

If the boycott movement succeeded in derailing Thaksin's party machine, which seemed to have made his effort to regain political control unstoppable, that was because the opposition could fall back on the minimum requirement of 20 percent of votes to fill electoral constituencies. But boycott as a weapon to deny electoral mandate to a reviled government has a history of failure in the Philippines. When the Left tried it in the 1985 snap election, it only succeeded in Isolating itself and making itself urelevant.

The last gasp

REP FERJENEL BIRON OF ILOILO HAS INTRODUCED House Bill 3830, aiming to lower drug prices through a Drug Rehabilitation Board. I first found the name of the proposed board strange, since we associate rehabilitation with drug dependents, but then maybe in a way the name is appropriate because really the main reason we're paying such outrageous prices for drugs is our total dependence on multinational drug cartels. Monopoly power Cartels? I'm sure the drug companies are going to come out soon to respond to the Biron bill and declare, as they have in the last 50 years or so, that there is no monopoly, that there are so many drug companies out there, multinational and local, and that this allows for healthy competition to keep prices

But people often forget that the drug market is very segmented, with each drug company specializing in particular lines. This means that for many vital products, you have only two or three companies cornering the market. This is the case for many antibiotics, intravenous fluids (dextrose and other products), cardiovascular drugs, anti-diabetics, even

Back in the 1980s, as I was researching for a book on pharmaceuticals, "Dying for Drugs," I was able to interview a physician who told me about how he had complained to a drug salesman about how expensive their antibiotic was. At that time, there were only two brands of that antibiotic available in the market. The drug salesman's reply? "That's impossible. We agreed to keep the prices of our antibiotics at about the same price."

I don't think the companies actually conspire in a formal sense, but they're really quite similar to the oil cartel, able to keep prices of their "competing" products almost at the same high levels, designed to squeeze as much of the last peso and centavo they can from the consumer. It's not just market forces at work here, but political economy. These companies are huge, with assets larger than the gross national product of the Philippines. Economics translates into politics. It's well known that the administration of US President George W. Bush is very-some will say too-friendly to the drug companies because these companies were among the largest contributors to the Republican Party's election coffers. These powerful companies will not spare any expense to curb attempts to temper their profits. They have opposed price control whenever possible. And they will oppose any attempt to introduce real market forces into the pharmaceutical sector. Expect the Birol bill to face attacks since it seeks to expand the efforts of the state-owned Philippine International Trading Corp. (PITC) to make parallel imports. This involves importation of cheaper brand-name products from other countries, and selling these through government hos-

Beyond rehab I wish Birol and his colleagues the best of luck as they try to get their bill passed, but I also feel that in the long run, we need to go back to the basics and ask why we are in this rut right now, paying some of the highest drug prices in the region. Roberto Pagdanganan, chief of the PITC, points out that the antihypertension medicine Norvasc is sold here at P44.75 per 5 mg tablet and P74.57 per 10 mg tablet, compared to PS.98 and P8.96, respectively, in Pak-We do not have our own drug industry to speak of, being almost totally import-dependent. We've been told time and time again, by the multinationals, that it's better to just import our drugs because this is more cost-effective, that we don't have a population large enough to support a local drug industry. I've wondered; with a population of 84 million, how can anyone say we don't have a domestic-market? Yes, the purchasing power is low but this is also relative: if drug prices continue the way they are, we can expect many Filipinos to continue to be unable to purchase the drugs they

We presume that like typhoons and landslides, high drug prices are inevitable. And when consumer activists point out that many of our neighbors provide much cheaper medicines, the multinationals say, "Oh, but those are inferior drugs, even counterfeit drugs." But the price comparisons involve the same products of multinationals in different countries, so when they cry "Pake drugs!" they're actually putting down their own medicines. We need to look at how other countries were able to bring drug prices down. China, Thailand and India were successful because they were more independent-minded in the past, refusing to sign patent laws that they felt were unfair to developing countries. As a result, their governments and local companies began to produce low-cost generics. Pacing competition from these generics, the multinationals had to lower their drug prices as well, which is why their products carrying the same brand names are cheaper in those countries. Those three countries have now acceded to patent laws, but were able to achieve a competitive edge and are always ready to invoke public-health emergencies to again produce patented drugs when needed. If the Philippines wants true "rehab," we need now to look at how we can build a local drug industry. I'm actually very uneasy about parallel imports, because it continues to rely on the products of multinationals in other countries and they could cut off supplies as well. We should now be looking at the national companies in India, China and Thailand, some of which are now recognized as world-class. For example Cipla in India is a major world supplier of antiretroviral drugs needed for HIV. But even as we look into imports, the government should be encouraging local companies to produce good quality medicines. Right now, parallel imports are killing, rather than helping, the local generic companies. We need to provide incentives, like tax exemptions for re search and innovation. That should include serious research into local medicinal plants; our neighbors have surged far ahead of us to tap these valuable resources. Even sadder, as we neglect our medicinal plants, foreign companies are com ing in and capping our resources, even taking out patents on them. I was surprised to see, in American natural health magazines, numerous advertisements for banaba ex tract-yes, that common tree found on our roadsides is an anti-diabetic.

Years back, amid the debates over parents and local drug production, we laughed at Thailand and China and India as being "backward," unable to keep up with the "realities" of giobalization. Today, they're having the last laugh as then citizens reup the bounties of strong local drug industries Ours is the last gasp as we suffer from the lack of affordable medicines.

A waste of money

SO THE COMELEC NEEDS P1 BILLION JUST TO verify the signatures of the "people's initiative" being undertaken to push for Charter change. That the initiative itself is of dubious value, given that there is still no enabling law spelling out how such an initiative should be conducted, seems to be of little consequence to both the Comeier and Malacafiang, Both seem determined to push it through, or let the train barrel through, to borrow the President's analogy.

Where the Comelec and Malacanang will find the P1 billion for the verification process, as well as the estimated P2.6 billion for a plebiscite doesn't seem such an insurmountable problem, either. The powers-that-be seem able to dig up scarce money for projects they totally believe in, even if it means scuttling other, even more urgently-needed projects and basic services. How many classrooms, hospitals, clinics and roads will be sacrificed to pave the way for the Cha-cha

While money hunters of the Arroyo administration can be expected to dig up the needed funds for Cha-cha, the question everyone seems to have neglected is: Is the Comelec itself a good steward of the people's money? Remember that it still has to explain how it managed to squander more than P2 billion of public funds in the aborted "modernization" program, for which the entire Cornelec board of commissioners stand indicted. Now they seem to be willing to waste even more money in what may ultimately be deemed a meaningless exercise.

LET me add my voice to the growing clamor against the administration's rash desire to circumvent the constitutional process needed to amend the Constitution.

With all legal avenues blocked, most prominently by a recalcitrant Senate, the administration is now treading on dangerous ground, forcing through a people's initiative that has yet to be tested or even gain legal standing, given the Supreme Court's previous ruling on a similar attempt to short-cut the constitutional amendment process. Pro-administration local officials have been crowing that they have met and even exceeded the necessary quotas, citing the "will of the people" as the ultimate arbiter of constitutionalism. But if the administration is so sure of the people's backing on this issue, why doesn't it bite the bullet and opt for a constitutional convention, where delegates duly elected by voters, will debate, discuss, study and vote on proposed amendments? If we're going to be spending money, we might as well spend it on a process that enjoys better legal footing.

MORE on our Boracay trip. Aside from making culinary discoveries, our recent outing also atforded us a chance to re-visit old favorites. My husband and son discovered Pizzeria Da Mario: Little Corner of Italy more than 10 years ago, when they went biking across the island and ended up, sweaty and hungry, at one end of Boracay, near Manoc-manoc Beach.

This was when they discovered a small, nondescript pizzeria and had what my son called "the best pizza I have ever tasted." A few years ago, the hubby and I had a chance to try Mario's pizza once more, and we were not disappointed.

On our last visit, a pilgrimage to Da Mario's was high on the agenda. We had no difficulty finding the place, which had since been enlarged into several huts surrounding a small garden, and eagerly scanned the menu. For our party of four, we ended up ordering two pizzas, the basic Margherita and the Napoletana, spiked with anchovies, which we found to our delight retained the crisp and thin crust and still bore the same zesty tomato sauce. In addition, my husband ordered Spaghetti with Marinara Sauce, while my son had Penne with tomato sauce. I decided to push my tuck with Spaghetti alla Carbonara, which I have long stopped ordering from restaurants in Manila because I was invariably disappointed. But Da Mario's came through, with a rich and tasty cream sauce accented with truly tasty slices of bacon. We ended up sharing our orders family-style, tasting and savoring our virtual smorgasbord of Italian dishes, honest and unpretentious in their presentation and preparation.

ONE other memorable discovery of ours was TJ's Heaven, which lies on the opposite end of the island, beneath the cliffs that demarcate White Beach from Diniwid Beach, TJ's Heaven is actually the restaurant of the Boracay Terraces Beach Resort, and my husband took me there primarily to gaze upon the architecture, a glass-and-concrete structure with rustic touches, such as trellises of bamboo.

Since we just had bunch, we had no room for a meal but decided to enjoy dessert—a fruit crepe and watermelon shakes—that were perfect for beating the heat, while enjoying the breeze stirring the leaves of the trees above us. We could have stayed there indefinitely, watching the endless parade of travelers footnath to the other side of the island, and the water craft crossing the horizon.

That same evening, the hubby and I tried another "first" for us in Boracay: massage on the beach. Beachfront massages have long been offered to loungers, but this was the first time we gave them a try. While the masahistas, who charge P300 for a full-body massage (the resort takes P60 as its cut), need more skills refining, at least they didn't end up straining our muscles! And nothing of course beats the gentle evening breeze rising out of the sea and the tide fulling us to naps.

Afterwards, we enjoyed pre-dinner cocktails from our own supplies: a chilled bottle of rose, chicken gizzard pâté and onion crisps. Dinner of grilled seafood followed at one of the beachfront restaurants along the busier section near Station 2, capping the final evening of our brief Boracay break.

WHEN YOU READ EARLY SPANISH ACCOUNTS of the Philippines, you get a feeling that it was an idyllic place. Some heroes, like Rizal, even referred to the Philippines as a "lost Eden." But look around you today, and wonder how we lost per-

Our rivers were once so clean that fish swam in them and Filipinos bathed in them. And I wouldn't be surprised if early Filipinos drank from the Pasig. But look at the Pasig's murky waters today and you can believe one drop would be enough to kill an elephant. Our rivers can no longer sustain life anymore, and this is why there is little or no danger from crocodiles anymore.

One of the more memorable scenes in "Noll Me Tangere" has Ibarra saving Flias from the jaws of a crocodile. If you go over the index of the 55-volume compilation of documents by Emma Helen Blair and James Alexander Robertson under "Reptiles (subdivision of vertebrates)," the most numerous entries cover crocodiles compared to those under serpents, lizards, toads and turtles. I did not realize, until I read Blair and Robertson. the difference between a crocodile and caiman (alligator)

There is a lengthy account of the Philippines circa 1650 by Fray Domingo Pernandez Navarrete about three incidents when people were eaten by crocodiles. Two are particularly interesting because in one, a friar is eaten for lunch, and in the other, a newly wed maiden was the victim.

The first story is about Fray Luis Gutierrez who was traveling to a village to celebrate his third Mass on the Feast of the Purification of Our Lady. "[H]e went by boat through a creek which was most dangerous because of the crocodiles. In a certain place, it was seen that one appeared disturbed. The Indians of the boat roused themseives and tried to force the craft forward and to make a loud noise with voices and cars. But nothing availed them, for with two cruel blows of its tail against the boat, the crocodile overturned it completely, so that they were all thrown into the water. The Indians, being lighter and unhampered by clothing, were able to reach land easily. The poor religious, weighted down by his habit and little used to swimming, was left to be overtaken by that fierce and bloodthirsty animal. It seized hun, and the poor man was buried in hts fierce entrails."

in the "Noil," it is the crocodile that ends up dead, leading one of the people on the banca to remark that the beast's misfortune was understandable because it hadn't gone to Mass that

Fray Domingo said there were so many crocodiles in Laguna de Bai that during the dry months, when cattle were brought to pasture near the lake, crocodiles would come out of the water and carry away horses and bulls "with great ease as the cat carries off a rat." It must have been so terrifying to even imagine death in the jaws of a crocodile that special wooden cages were lowered at certain parts of the rivers so that one could bathe in peace. These acted very much like the metal shark cage we see on National Geographic or the Discovery channel. The problem was that there were times when a crocodile got into the cage and persons jumped in without than the first.

Fray Domingo's next account was more tragic

"A short time before my arrival in the islands, a very peculiar thing happened. Some Indians had been married, and, as they were about to eat, the bride was desirous of going down to the river to wash her feet, as they were in the habit of doing every day and every hour. The house stood partly over the river, as is their custom. While she was washing, a crocodile attacked her and carried her off. At her cries and the noise, some of the people run out and saw the poor girl in the teeth of the crocodile, which was making off with its prey. The bridegroom, who beheld with his own eyes such a spectacle, blind with love and aroused by anger, with dagger in hand (but more rashly than prudently) threw himself into the water, and followed the beast that was carrying off his beloved prize. He overtook it and fought with it. He recovered his wife and returned triumphantly with the spoil in his arms, but she was already dead and lifeless. The bridegroom came back a widower. and sad and mournful, and with tears was that wedding ended. That was a notable and very memorable occurrence."

Fray Domingo ended this part of his account with a lifesaving tip we should all remember when we find ourselves with a crocodile as a worst-case scenario: One must keep cool and attack the crocodile in its most sensitive part—the

Prankly, I don't think this is a very reliable tip, coming from a man who claimed crocodiles had four eyes—two above water and two below. Actually, it just looks this way because when the crocodile swims, it has half its eyes on the surface

Another item we should ask Crocodile Dundee or Kim Atienza concerns population control practiced by crocodiles. According to Fray Domingo, a trocodile goes upstream to lay her eggs and goes downstream to rest. When the eggs batch, the crocodile opens her mouth and waits for the poor things to be brought down by the current for her

Tale of two Asean leaders

FORMER PRESIDENT RAMOS SAID THAT President Macapagal-Arroyo and Thailand Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra are both confronted by a crisis triggered by "charges of corruption, cronyism, poor governance and the propensity to use strong armed methods to stay in power"

What is different is that in Thailand the mili-

Who wants GMA out?

"65% favor GMA quitting." (PDI, 3/17/06) Yes, 65 percent of Filipinos want her out, but who are these Filipinos?

I believe they are the non-taxpayers, powerhungry politicians, turncoats and deposed presidents and ex-presidents who have nothing better to do

And the bulk of these non-taxpayers are being paid to go against the President with tax money or "earnings" from corrupt and greedy politicians. What a pity.

It's also very sad that the media, the politicians and the people have not matured at all. With all the bickering and finger-pointing, it's not surprising that people (taxpayers at that!) are leaving the country. And I did And how glad I was that I finally did

Why can't everybody just cooperate with whoever is at the helm now? Act as one. Support one another. There have been significant economic improvements, why discredit the leader? Let the President do her job Filipinos have been complaining too much. There's too much of democracy but very little of responsibility. It's time to work together, now

The real Monkees

MAY I SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT ON A comment in Rma Jimenez-David's column. (PDI, 3/22/06) Now, if only the original Monkees, especially Davy Jones, could get together and disprove the nasty rumor that they predated Milh Vandli by staging a live concert here, I might yet be convinced to get on this bandwagon to our pop music past.

The Monkees have reunited about four times in the United States, from 1986, 1989, 2000 and 2001. They most certainly do play their own instruments and sing their own songs. Mike Nesmith is the only one that does not participate in the reunions, although he did make a brief appearance in several concerts in England during the 1986 tour. The last reunion produced a CD that can be purchased on Jones' website, www.davyjones.net, and on Micky Dolenz's website, www.mickydolenz.

The Monkees are all extremely talented, excellent showmen and musicians, including Jones, who now plays the guitar as well as his ever present cambourine, which is not as easy to play as one might think, Peter Tork plays about seven instruments extremely well, and Dolenz can still play the drums as well as he plays the guitar.

They always sang; that was never faked Likening these talented men to Milli Vanidi was a very bad mistake plummeted.

Thai Prime Minister Thaksin quits

Thaksin's party won 57 percent of Sunday's parliamentary election, according to preliminary results, but scores of voters had abstained, including a majority in the capital, Bangkok.

Thaksin's critics-who for two months have been staging railes drawing as many as 100,000 people-rejected the prime minister's idea of a reconciliation committee as insincere and called for new antigovernment protests this week. (See related story in The World, Page A23.)

The main opposition parties boycotted Sunday's poll, leaving Thaksm's ruling That Rak That-That Love That-party uncontested in 278 of 400 constituencies for the lower house of Parlia-

cles undecided, because the sole results showed his popularity had candidate in each race failed to win the required 20 percent of the vote, according to the unofficial results.

The rest of the seats in Parliament would go to the ruling party except for one, which went to a candidate from an obscure party in the south, unofficial results showed.

Record abstentions

Partial results showed a record high number of abstention ballots in Bangkok, where the anti-Thaksin movement is strongest, and in southern Thailand, which is traditionally a stronghold of the opposition Democrat Party. But the ruling party was expected to sweep the north and northeast where rural voters have benefited from Thaksin's generous social welfare and economic assistance programs.

Thaksin had previously said he would step down if his party won less than 50 percent of the vote.

Tuesday was particularly surprising, given that he had said on national relevision just one day before that he saw no reason to resign since results showed that his party had won 16 million votes. Nonetheless, he acknowledged the strong protest vote.

The three parties that had boycotted Sunday's election said that new elections should be organized without Thaksin and had again called on him to quit.

Resign first'

"It's too late for national reconcibation," Democrat Party head Abhisit Vejjajiva said after a meeting between the parties.

"We would join new elections, but Mr. Thaksin has to resign first."

In the latest returns, Thaksin's party had taken 54 percent of the vote, with more than two-thirds of constituencies counted, elec-complete count might not be released until the end of the week.

Thaksin masted his party won with 57 percent of the vote despite a strong protest vote, especially in Bangkok and the South, but the more than 16 million votes he claimed fell a long way short of the 19 million people who gave him a landshde election win just one year earlier.

Even if the final count confirms Thaksin's victory, election officials said by-elections will be held on April 23 in 38 constituencies where the only candidate in the race failed to win the required 20 percent of the vote.

Another by-election will be held in a district where all the candidates were disqualified over irregularities in the nomination

Parliament cannot convene to confirm a new prime minister un-

Thaksin's announcement late tion officials said, warning that a til all 500 seats are filled, promising weeks of further uncertainty.

The People's Alliance for Democracy, which led two months of anti-Thaksin protests, rejected his claim of victory and a compromise offer under which be would step down if an independent panel told him to do so.

Thakun called the election three years early after two months of street protests against his rule. However, the opposition boycott undermined the credibility of the polls and ensured a huge protest vote against the premier.

The protracted crisis has cast a cloud over one of the region's most dynamic economies. The government has already adjusted economic growth forecasts and the stock market has taken a hit.

Protests demanding Thaksin's resignation began in February after his family sold $1.9 billion worth of shares, without paying

Now, Abalos does talking for Borra

partment said Borra and Abalos would issue a statement but reporters were later told just to listen to Abalos's interview on talevision later in the night.

ANC television broadcast sound bites of Borra's explanation at the Comelec en banc meeting: "I did say that there was cheating, but it was not done by one party or one candidate alone. It's endemic ... I do not want to be a hypocrite. In every election, there has always been cheating."

The sound bites reflected Borra's testimony before the Senate.

During the Senate inquiry, Sen. Rodolfo Biazon, chair of the committee on defense and national security, asked Borra if he believed massive cheating had taken place in 2004.

Borra replied: "From the actual and empirica, pieces of evidence [presented at the Senate probe], there was cheating. There was cheating in some areas. There was massive cheating in some areas but hopefully very minimal."

He made the statement after hearing the testimony of election experts Hermenegildo Estrella gave audiovisual presentations purporting to that provinces in Mindanao to favor Ms Arroyo in 2004.

Biazon's committee is looking into the security aspects of the alleged wiretapping of phone conversations during the 2004 balloting purportedly between Ms Arroyo and former Election Commusioner Virgilio Garcillano.

The opposition said that the recordings were evidence that Ms Arroyo had manipulated the vote. Last September her allies killed proceedings impeachment against her over claims of poll

Main rival is dead

Romulo Macalintal, Ms Arroyo's election lawyer, said on Monday that because his client's main rival, movie star Pernando Poe Jr., was already dead, there's "no real party in interest" and the case was closed.

Macalintal said that if there was evidence to show irregularities, the Comelec should know what to do. In the meantime, he said he had advised Ms Arroyo not to comment on the cheating allegations.

However, in the House of Representatives, Ms Arroyo's allies and Roberto Verzola. The two expectedly came to her defense yesterday.

House Majority Leader Prospero vote-shaving and vote-padding. Nograles said that it was clear the for the commissioners ... to stay dence so far presented. They're all along as early as two years and a new opposition witness with a "skewed" analysis of the polis.

"The Senate wiretap probe has become irrelevant since the elections are long over and the poll protest against the President had been dismissed by the Presidential Electoral Tribunal," Nograles said in a statement.

Senate not electoral tribunal

The Senate is not the Presidential Electoral Tribunal. What they can't do in court, they present in the Senate. They should stop crucifying the President in the Senate. That's not part of the script for Lent," Nograles added.

Lanao del Sur Rep. Benasing Macarambon said the Senate wiretap probe had lost its steam and the senators were only trying "Whatever they do, the Senate cannot arouse public interest anymore. The people are ured of the poll fraud assue since the opposition failed to present credible evidence until now," Macarambon said.

House Minority Leader Francis Escudero called for the resignation of the Comelec commissioners involved in the 2004 elections.

"There's no longer any reason had been done in at least six. Senate inquiry was meant to be- in their posts for their sheer and smirch the reputation of the Chief urter failure to comply with the Executive with the presentation of job description that they swore to uphold," Escudero said.

Impeach commissioners

Akbayan Rep. Lorenta Ann Rosales raised the possibility of instituting impeadment proceedings against the Comeler commissioners.

*Questions of whether we should impeach Abalos or not is something that is already being discussed because he himself was the one who denied that there was any fraud that was committed in the 2004 elections," Ros-

"We cannot go on with any kind of free, credible elections under his chairmanship given his performance in the recent past,"

Biazon said he would give much weight to Borra's admission of poll fraud when his committee prepares its report.

"My conclusion will definitely include the conclusion of Borra You may not believe me, but bet, & Loren says she's vindicated ter believe him." Biazon said in a phone interview.

"His conclusion was based on the quality of evidence presented in the hearing," he said, referring to the two analysts' studies. They were the strongest evibe verified." The crime: cheating documentary evidence that can

Biazon said the committee would tie up the testimonies of Borra, Estrella and Verzola with the statements of past witnesses when it drafts its report.

There was cheating in the elections. And I'm not looking at who won or lost. That is irrelevant. Winning or losing in an election is not a crime. The crime is cheating in an election," he said.

Senate Minority Leader Aquilino Pimentel Jr. praised Borra for admitting the existence of anomalies in the 2004 vote.

"Allies of GMA can kill the impeachment, but they can't kill the truth. It keeps coming back to haunt them. No amount of ignoring the truth can bury for good the clamor of people that she rectify what she had done by means of snap elections," he said in an

Former Sen. Loren Legarda eard Borra's testimony vindicated her and validated her charge that Ms Arroyo and Vice President Noli de Castro were illegitimate occupants of their posts.

That's what I've been saying ago. That's the reality in the 200 elections," Legarda told the

But Abalos recalled the Hell Garci conversation took place May 29, 2004, five days after th Comelec chair leaked to reporters the news that Ms Arroyo had won by a margin of a million votes.

"We could no longer make any vote-padding or shaving by that time," he stressed.

Abalos also expressed conster nation why the Comelec was bej ing unjustly discredited.

You know what's difficult here is that if it's us who are speaking, they don't believe us, but if others are talking, they believe them more," he said.

'Destabilization plot'

The chair also said he was "wondering really why they go on insisting that there was vote-padding and shaving? Asked what he thought could be the reason, he replied, "I think this is part of another destabllization plot."

Abalos challenged those claims ing to have uncovered any cheat ing to go to the Comelec and file the appropriate case. "Bring it to us so we can see the evidence," he said. With reports from Leila B. Salaverria and Cynthia D. Baihe Senate," Arroyo said.

"Had media not stood [their] ground and also the public, then we would have a muzzied press. we would have a controlled and managed press," he said.

Arroyo said the President's declaration of a state of national space ended on March 30 with the opening of what is conceivably the first environmental art gallery and alternative art space in the Philippines. Velasco and her husband Dominic, a photographer, decided to convert part of their office buliding into a place exclusively for art that uses natural or recycled materials or delivers a strong conservation message.

Learning about nature

Stairway Gallery, housed in the Imacron building at 115 Kamuning Road, Quezon City, formally opened on Thursday night its first exhibit of au natural art works that convey the need for environmental preservation.

The opening brought together noted artists who care about the environment-Luis Stuart, Paz Abad Santos, Ben Cabrera and Bobby Castillo-and environmentalists who appreciate their conscientious art.

"I was looking for a marriage between advocacy, environment and art ... I want this to be the place to go to [if one wants to] learn about nature," Velasco

Indeed, the gallery is a veritable schoolroom on nature.

"Chimes" made from dried, preserved leaves of Marang trees adorn the entrance. Dividers, made by Stuart from inlaid abaca parchment and standing nearly five feet, serve as partitions in the second floor room.

Castillo's unusually low dinner and coffee tables, made of sculpted glass and appearing like tree trunks down to the rings, are carefully laid on the floor, some of them featuring a saw as a center-

The low table sculptures, which make it nearly impossible to eat comfortably, challenge those who like to engage in "armchair discourses" about the environment to act on their sentiments, Velasco said.

Fragile beauty

"The notion of people bending in discomfort to enjoy a meal provides an awareness of the consequences of our action or Inaction toward nature and the environment. It challenges us to act be-

The leaves were gathered in Thong, Quezon, where Stuart lives and teaches farmers to make "actual-size photographs of the sun, of a plant, on grass."

Along with the heliographs are trademark Santos's tapestries made from Indigenous materials like shells, cotton; seeds and stems on a burlap sack serving as canvas.

Roof deck

The building's roof deck, still an extension of the gallery, is for those who wish to enjoy ephemeral art such as rock bald ancing, or to simply relax on a wooden bench, protected from distractions by dividers made from sawdust, eggshells and oth er recycled materials.

Velasco remains hopeful that things will look up for the Philips pine environment someday soon.

"If there's any way a simple person like me can raise awarel ness on environmental conserval tion, why not? We're very strong on positive change," she said.

This will provide stability in the key positions in the Armed Forces," Cruz said.

His proposal, however, means that some generals could serve well beyond the 56-year-old retirement age set by the Constitution.

Aside from extending the tenure of generals, Cruz proposed the promotion of senior officials based on performance.

"As you go higher in the senior ranks of officers, performance should be given more weight rather than seniority... That's one of the things that we are putting in the new national defense act," Cruz said on the sidelines of an evacuation drill in Makati

He said the defense department also want-

Cruz's proposed overhaul of the promotion system is expected to raise a lot of hackles in the military, especially among senior officers who have come to expect promotion as something that comes with

Retirement at 60

Military officers retire after 30 years in the service or upon reaching the age of 56, whichever comes later, as provided for in Presidential Decree No. 1638 as amended.

The 1987 Constitution prohibits any extension except for the chief of staff whose term may be extended by the President to complete a term of three years.

We're also going to put a cap on the age. We're still studying it, maybe about 60 years

Republic Act No. 8186 prescribes a maximum tenure for senior officials of a given rank before they are retired for failing to get promoted to the next rank.

On Monday, a spokesperson said the AFP would support amendments to the Constitution to limit politicking in the military.

Gen. Generoso Senga, AFP chief of staff, has presented two proposed amendments to the Constitution. Clipping the power of the bicameral Commission on Appointments over the appointments of senior officials as provided for under Article VII Section 16, and setting a fixed three-year term for the AFP chief of staff.

Despite its insistence on being apolitical, the military leadership has allowed its soldiers to sign the Malacahang backed people's inmative to amend the Constitution.

Senate OKs 3-year term for AFP chief

The Senate has approved a bill fixing the term of the chief of staff at three years to help insulate the multary brass from pontics, Sen. Rodolfo Biazon said yesterday.

Biazon, chair of the Senate committee on national defense and security, said it was now up to the House of Representatives to pass a

Senate Bill No. 1862, which did not discount that a future AFP chief of staff could be a woman, fixed the chief of staff's term of office at three years but also allowed the President to remove "him or her" from office for "loss of confidence."

"If the law is enacted, it will stop the practice of the revolving-door policy and insulate the position of the AFP chief of staff from political influence," Biazon said in a He said the Senate approved on third reading SB 1862 titled "An Act Prescribing A Fixed Term of Office for the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines," on March 7,

Biazon said the bill was sent to the House for concurrence "more than a year ago" on March 9, 2005

If President Macapagal-Arroyo is serious about her proposal to fix the term of the AFP chief of staff, she must arge her supporters in the House of Representatives to prioritize the counterpart bill, Biazon said

Ms Arroyo on Monday backed proposals for fixed terms of office for the AFP and police chiefs.

Revolving door policy

Senate President Franklin Drilon said Ms Arroyo apparently learned the folly of her "revolving door policy" when it came to appoint ing the AFP chief of staff.

Drilon said the quick turnover of chiefs of staff "did not promote stability in the military."

There is no continuity of posicy in the Armed Forces when the chief of staff is replaced from time to time. That's why we are faced with all these coup attempts," he said in a statement

Since Ms Arroyo became President in January 2001, the country has had eight AFP chiefs of staff-Angelo Reyes, Diomedio Villanueva, Roy Cimatu, Benjamin Defensor, Dionisio Santiago, Narciso Abaya, Efren Abu and Senga-with terms ranging from two months to just over one year, "not to mention naming over 50 retired military officers to civilian posts."

Biazon said he supported Ms Arroyo's call. to enact a law fixing the term of office of the APP chief of staff so that it can help depoliticize the military.

Under SB 1862-authored by Senators Biazon, Lot Ejercito Estrada and Richard Gordon-the AFP chief of staff will have a fixed term of three years, which would start on the date of "his or her first appointment by the President, regardless of the date of confirmation by the Commission on Appointments "

Deferred retirement

"When the officer appointed to the position of chief of staff reaches the compulsory retirement age before the end of his or her three-year term, the statutory compulsory retirement of the chief of staff shall be deferred until the completion of his or her prescribed three-year term," the bill said.

"Provided, however, that the chief of staff may be removed by the President as Commander in Chief for loss of confidence as determined solely by the President even before the end of his or her term of three years."

The bill would disallow the extension of an AFP chief of staff's term "except in cases of war or national emergencies as declared by Congress."

It said no officer should be appointed chief of staff if that official "has less than one year of service remaining in the active service."

Changing Kalinga's 'warrior culture'

By Desiree Caluza Lubuagan, Kalinga

THE CORDILLERA PROVINCE of Kalinga has been known for head-hunting expeditions and fierce wars among different tribes since its early history. Officials and elders want to erase that perception of violence through activities that can foster peace and cooperation among the indigenous communities.

Last month, people in the hinterland town of Lubuagan (pop: 9,875 in 2000) staged the "Amung Chi Bochong" festival to make peace last in the place once torn by tribal violence. They gathered at the Emilio Aguinaldo Park for rituals, songs and dances.

According to one of the elders, former Councilor Emmanuel Bacacao, the bochong (or bodong) is an agreement between two tribes to prevent or end a conflict.

"in its wider sense, [bochong] is the institution around which the Kalinga way of life revolves," Bacacao said.

The festival was highlighted by the reenactment of a series of rituals that the elders perform to end the wars.

Peace pact ritual

One of the significant numbers is the haved, where symbols used in a cleansing rate are collected to signal the start of peace dialogues.

The tribes use a tallagen clu bochong, a platform where the symbols are placed, and a tupog, which consists of a bowl, a red cloth the size of a handkerchief, and an egg. The tupog is placed at the center of the tallagen.

The egg symbolizes the fragility of life and honor that must be preserved by the bothong, while the red cloth means parenta, care, Bacacao said. The peace pact holder keeps the cloth after the celebration.

The bowl represents the palms of the bothong holders who protect the lives, property and honor of the tribes forging peace.

"When a serious breach of the peace agreement is committed, [the peace part holder cuts] a piece of the red cloth and sends this to the (violator] to inform him of the violation," he said.

kabochong (party to a peace pact). Also placed on the tollagen are the sayong (saleng or pinewood strips used for kindling fire), which symbolizes light, warmth and comfort to the kabochong; and the gipus (knife decorated VIOIENCE

Members of a party forging peace dip their fingers into the biloklong and touch their paveis. Residents believe that this practice protects people against a butut (a serious ithress) and, at the same time, deanses their hands so they will not cause illness to the kabochong.

Sticks and runo (a vanety of bamboo) shoots are placed on the ground to ward off evil spirits during the peace dialogue.

Spears decorated with a topis (native woven skirt), g-strings and belts are also displayed to symbolize security, justice and peace that the pact guarantees.

Traditional justice

Bacacao said the festival was staged to remind tribe members of the significance of peace and justice in their community, especially at this time when the practice of bodong is being overshadowed by modern laws.

He said the elders were glad that despite the influence of modern laws, some members still seek out the bodong holders because they consider the traditional justice system faster in resolving conflicts than the courts.

But the Church, he said, once criticized the Lubuagan tribe for its adherence to customs and traditions related to the bothong.

Cirilo Bawer, a school teacher, said the tribe had to struggle to revive these rituals amid Criticisms from the Church. Those trying to revive these rimals in the 1960s were called pagans and uncivilized," he said.

Through time, however, local missionaries began supporting efforts to revive the rituals of the

"We have become proponents of reviving our own culture. Through this festival, we begin to appreciate it more," Bawer said.

Lubuagan Mayor Johnny Dickpus said his tribe had forged bothong with most tribes in the province, and through these agreements, they had settled conflicts and improved their social and economic lives.

Spirit of adventure

Bacacao said his tribe started practicing the bothong as a result of problems brought about by the emergence the "warrior culture" 200 years

Labuagan then experienced wealth and abundance as the town's rice production was more than enough for the people, he said.

But he said this status gave people time "to satisfy their spirit of adventure."

"Venturing into the lowlands of the Cagayan Valley to the east, and the Ilocos to the west, they found people were easy to rob because they were kept unarmed by their Spanish rulers. From these hunting grounds, they collected carabaos, gold and other precious metals and treasures like gongs, jars and beads made up of rare stones and gems," he said.

"For easy picking, however, these Kalinga natives also began to rob one another along their hunting paths and raided each other's villages. They developed a culture of arrogance and vanity. They began to decorate their bodies with tattoos depicting their manly exploits. A male body without tattoo was considered naked and a body well-covered with tattoo was considered welldressed and most desirable to women."

Changing picture

Tribal elders interceded and developed the bochong to stop violence because they believed that the Kalinga society was headed for self-destruction because of the liflings.

'So, elders came about to change the picture. By divine intervention and guidance, the elders were able to redirect the attention of their people from killing and creating enemies back to working and building up families," Bacacao said.

The system involves the settlement of cases and disputes commutted between families or tribes, said Sumakay, whose father has also served as a member of the tungtongon.

Cases are heard before elders facilitate the decision-making to be offered as an agreement between the parties involved.

The tangtongan has emerged as a traditional practice among the Kalanguya people in settling disputes because of its conformity with their quality of life, Sumakay said.

"This is the least expensive judicial system for us since most Kalanguya tribe members only subsist on farming. We cannot here lawyers and pay court fees," he said.

Members of the tungtongan are chosen according to their profession. They are young and old Kalanguya who come from religious groups, the academe, police, local government and other

Fair judgment

This way, traditional beliefs and practices are discussed to facilitate the crafting of a fair and proper judgment, Sumakay said.

Most of the cases lodged with the tungtongan do not even reach the lupong tagapamayapa (peace and order body) of their barangay council, he said.

Depending on the severity of the cases, the perpetrators are told to comply with the agreement, whether in cash, kind or any means deemed necessary by the families involved and

"This is also a form of enforcing discipline within our villages and inflicting punishment among perpetrators to refrain from doing the same offense in the future," Surnakay said.

After an agreement has been made, he said, each party would yow not to repeat the offense.

Sumakay said one of the controversial offshoots of the tungtongun system in the town happeried in 2002 when Vice Mayor Donior Tidang, also a Kalanguya, faced a rape complaint.

Easing case backlog

Through the system, Tidang paid P90,000 to amicably settle the case. Since then, 30 cases, such as murder, attempted murder and theft, have been sertled. Local court officials also see the practice as a way to declog their dockets, Sumakay said.

Mayors assail loss of control of water in bill

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO— and I'm sure that he would either League of Cities of the Philippines (LCP) and the Philippine Association of Water Districts (PAWD) in opposing the amendments proposed by Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile to a law that created the more than 400 water districts in the country.

The Pampanga Mayors League, in a resolution approved on Monday, said the power to appoint the directors of the water districts should remain solely with the municipal and city may-

This provision in the Provincial Water Unlines Act of 1973 (Presidennal Decree 198) should be retained, the league said.

in Enrile's proposal, the appointees of the local executives were limited to two instead of five in the case of small to medium-sized water districts or seven in bigger water dis-

The Local Water Utilities Administration (LWUA), which used to merely confirm the appointees, was suggested to appoint the malority who would comprise the board

Lubao Mayor Dennis Pineda, PML president, called the proposal "unjust." He said in diminishing the power of mayors, their roles in the regulation and development of the water districts are also reduced.

"Nobody knows the situation in the localities than the local executives. You bring in an outsider Pampanga mayors joined the be unfamiliar or detached or he'ilface resistance from local authorities," Pineda said.

The PML said "neither the PAWD nor any member of the local water districts was consulted before the proposed amendments reached the [Senate]."

Pineda said a copy of the resolution will be given to President Macapagal-Arroyo when she celebrates her 59th birthday in Pampanga today (Wednesday).

In Senate Bill 2165 filed in November last year, Enrile sought to increase the capital stock of the LWUA from P2 billion to P10 billion to "enable it to further spread the benefits of improved potable water systems particularly to the yet unserved areas of the coun-

The bill also proposed to restore the provisions on tax exemptions to "enable the LWUA to establish and activate about 100 more water districts by 2010."

The LCP in a policy statement dated March 23, said the proposal to limit the appointing power of the mayors "negates the fact that local government units have a better understanding of their constituents particularly on the delivery of basic services."

The LCP said the Local Government Code of 1991 gave mayors the mandate to address general welfare. Enrile's proposal, it said, was "contrary" to the goals of devolution and autonomy. Tonette Orejas, PDI Central Luzon Desk

WHAT'S INSIDE

Cell phone rob-slay suspect arrested

By Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

POLICE ARRESTED THE OTHER NIGHT ONE of three suspects who held up and shot dead a 27-year-old call center employee inside an FX Taxi in Pasig City on Sunday night.

The driver of the Mitsubishi Adventure also positively identified suspect Ryan Concuera, 22, as the one who allegedly shot victim Charlene Santos, 27, in the head.

Pasig City police chief Senior Supt. Romeo Abaring said they have also identified one of Concuera's cohorts as Rodeo Bartolome.

Second suspect

Bartolome was also taken under police custody last night, but Abaring said they could not yet deciare him a suspect because no witness has personally identified him.

Santos, a former University of the Philippines Diliman student, was on her way to meet a friend when three robbers declared a holdup inside the

One of the robbers, whom the driver identified as Concuera, reportedly lost his temper when Santos refused to give up her cell phone and shot her in the head.

Concuera demed the allegations before reporters yesterday, even if the winness had already positively identified him as the gunnan who was wearing a jacket and a cap.

Denial

"I don't know anything about that case," Concuera said as photographers took turns in taking photos of tamoes on his chest, arm and back. But he admitted that he was jailed in 2000 for rob-

"We have an informant who said the gang struck that evening," PO3 Roger Baltazar told the Inquirer.

Armed with an arrest warrant against Concuera from the Pasig City Regional Trial Court Branch 71 for another robbery and frustrated homicide case, police barged inside Concuera's house at 8:30 p.m. Monday Concuera also demed any involvement in the case.

Bring back cops - Eusebio

By Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

PASIG CITY MAYOR VICENTE EUSEBIO HAS expressed alarm over a string of unsolved highprofile killings in the city in the last three weeks.

He also asked the national police to temporarily stop sending Pasig policemen away for retraining. "Some of our investors have been asking me what is happening. But what can I do?," Eusebio told the INQUIRER.

The mayor was stripped of his police powers last month following his decision to demolish a compound of shanties used as shabu dens in Barangay Sto. Tomas, just five days after the national police raided the compound.

Pollowing the incident, the National Capital Region Police Office had been sending the city's policemen, as well as members of the Eastern Police District, in batches for retraining in Subic, Zambales.

"The Nauonal Police Commission should stop sending policemen for retraining without any replacement because it is affecting the capability of the police," Eusebio said.

Last Sunday, a call center worker, Charlene Santos, was shot in the head by three men who robbed the FX taxi she was riding in (see story was killed in Ortigas Center. On March 29, Chief Insp. Renato Marasigan of the national police's Internal Affairs Service was shot to death as he was driving his car in Barangay Malinao.

On March 16, businessman Leonardo Umale

Unpaid bills end in water crisis in Tondo

By Margaux C. Ortiz

MORE THAN 15,000 RESIDENTS in Smokey Mountain (also called Paradise Heights) have been without water for the past two days after a utility company cut off service to the area because of P8.6 million in unpaid bills.

In a statement, Maynilad Water said members of the Smokey Mountain Community Associa-

Manila beats rest, lifts number coding

By Margaux C. Ortiz and Tarra V. Quismundo

MANILA MAYOR LITO ATIENZA jumped the gun on the Metropolitan Manua Development Authority (MM-DA) yesterday by announcing the lifting of the number-coding scheme in the city this summer beginning today.

"We saw that the number of vehicles on our roads has significantly dropped during the past summer vacations. We are lifting the number coding scheme so everybody can enjoy the summer months," Atienza said in a statement.

The MMDA has proposed the suspension of the UVVRP during the summer break, but is still getting the Vergel de Dios said.

approval of the majority of the more signed the resolution approving the proposal, bringing to 12 the number of mayors who favor the suspension of the number-coding scheme.

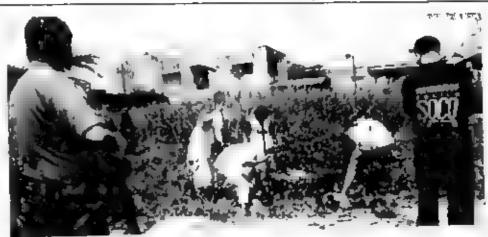

MMDA Traffic Operations Center Executive Director Angelito Vergel de Dios, however, said that although they already have a majority, they would wait for the decision of the remaining five other mayors, all voting members of the agency's policy-making body, the Metro Manila Council.

"It would suffice for implementation, but we will wait for the other mayors to vote on the resolution, so that nobody would be offended,"

With Atienza's announcement, Metro's 17 mayors. Yesterday, four however, only four have yet to approve the resolution-Jaime Freshedi of Muntin.upa, Enrico Echiverri of Caloocan, Malabon's Toby Tiangco, and Makati Mayor Jejomar Binay

Binay, however, said that he was not in favor of lifting the UVVRP "Traffic volume here does not decrease [during summer] We will just have a problem if we implement it," he added

MMDA Chair Bayani Fernando eatlier proposed the lifting of the UVVRP from April to the first week of June, citing a study that showed a 30 percent decrease in vehicle volume on major roads during the summer

POLICE look on as men dig up a swamp at Barangay Sto. Tomas, Pasig to look for the body of an alleged drug peddler.

Swamp search continues

By Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

POLICE YESTERDAY STARTED DIGGING up a swamp to look for the body of "Bernar do," an alleged drug pusher whom a witness claimed had been ordered killed by the operators of a shabu mart in Pasig City.

"Finding the body will prove that the operations of the drug mart were highly organized and systematic. This will also strengthen our case against the arrested drug den owners," Chief Insp. Ismael Fajardo of the Philippine National Police Anti Illega. Drugs Special Operations Task Force told the inoutrer.

But as of yesterday afternoon, the five residents tasked to dig up the area had not yet found the victim. The digging was cailed off at 5:30 p.m., and was set to resame in the morning.

The PNP AIDSOTF discovered a compound which housed more than 40 shannes serving as shabu dens inside Sitio Mapayapa, Barangay Sto. Tomas and arrested more than 300 people in an operation on Feb. 10. The compound was just half a kilometer away from the Pasig City Hall and the Eastern Police District.

Police also suspect that the bodies of victims who had ran afoul of the drug den operators were buried in the compound, Bernardo was reportedly killed because he had told the police about the drug operations at the compound.

Makati biz area gets ready for disaster scenario

By Tarra Y. Quismundo

ALL ACTIVITY IN THE CENTER OF Makati, the country's business district, grounded to a halt for several hours yesterday as employees staged a synchronized earthquake drill.

At a given signal, employees of SM Makati, Glorietta 4, the Metro Rail Transit Ayala station, Edsa Carpark, Oakwood Premier apartments, and the Intercontinental Hoter estab-·lishments at the Ayala Center-left Ttheir work stations and went to the Rustan's car park. The drill was aimed at familiarizing workers with the emergency procedure to be followed in case of an earthquake and an aftershock that would result in the collapse of a building.

Forest park in time for Earth Day

By Jocelyn R. Uy

A FOREST PARK IN PASAY CITY WILL SOON give Metro denizens breathing space in the ban forest park will become the main venue midst of the urban concrete jungle.

The Cultural Center of the Philippines has dedicated a portion of its property-a 16hectare lightly wooded patch-at the corner as the future site of the Liwasang Kalikasan.

"The CCP is doing this because we want to promote the 'culture-life' concept which utilizes arts and culture as a means to promote environmental protection and preservation." said CCP president Nestor Jardan at a press conference for the launching of Earth Day 2006 yesterday.

Jardin added that rapid commercial and urban development has been slowly cholong up Metro Manúa, leaving its residents with no or limited breathing space. In time, the CCP official hopes that the ur-

Sid Hildawa, manager of the CCP Visual, Literary and Media Arts, added that the proof Roxas Boulevard and Vicente Sotto Street ject, which has a P22 million budget, will make the CCP Complex not just a cultural center, but also an "economic-environmental zone" that would draw in local and foreign tourists. The park wall be transformed into a rainforest lush with native trees, shrubs, flowering plants, and "shade-tolerant" crops . The urban forest park will make its debut on April 22 to mark International Earth Day with a program utled "Sibol: Earth Day at the CCP" featuring a concert and a fashion show.

Thaksin claims victory; political crisis worsens

intensified Tuesday as the country awaited official results from weekend snap elections, after, Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra claimed victory and his opponents resumed calls for his resignation.

Thaisin said iate Monday that he had won 57 percent of votes, according to preliminary resuits, but that he would address his opponents' accusations of corruption and abuse of power by letting an undependent committee decide whether he should step down.

"I want to set up an independent committee to bring together all those with different opinions to find a way forward. If that committee tells me to quat, then I wil. quit," Thaksin said, speaking live on prime-time television in his first substantive comments since Sunday's election.

The Election Commission was mutially expected to release complete poll returns Tuesday but it Thaksin to quit."

BANGKOK-THAILAND'S POLITICAL CRISIS has said there could be a delay. By Tuesday morning, counting had only been completed for about half the country's 400 constituencies, Ekachai Warumprapha, the commission spokesperson, told The Associated Press.

We do not know when we will be able to make the official announcement," he said.

Thaksm's critics-who for two months have been staging rallies drawing as many as 100,000 people-rejected the prime minister's idea of a reconciliation committee as insincere and called for new anti-government protests this week.

Thaksin should accept that the people have given him a big slap in the face," said Chamlong Srimuang, a leader of the People's Alliance for Democracy, which organized the anti-government demonstrations that prompted him to call early elections. "We do not accept any proposal by Thaksin. We stand firm on demands for

Memorial Mass for John Paul II

ROME-Tens of thousands of pilgrims, many of them holding up pictures and relics of the late John Pauli I, flocked to a memorial mass in St Peter's Square Monday celebrated by the fate puntiff's successor Pope Barredict XVI. Benedict concelebrated the scienn mass with around 30 cardinals, most of them appointed by John Paul II. In his homely, the 78-year-old pontiff paid tribute to his predecessor's faith, which he said was "strong and authentic and tree from fear and compromise." Benedict said such faith had a "contagious effect on the hearts of so many people, due also to so many apostolic pilgrimages in every part of the world and especially due to his last journey, which was his agony and his death."

Sharon to undergo skull operation

JERUSALEM—Cornatose israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon will undergo an operation on his skull Tuesday, said a spokesman for the hospital where he is being treated. "Prime Minister Ariel Sharon will undergo an operation Tuesday to restore part of the skull which was perforated during an operation after his brain hemorrhage," said the spokesman for the Hadassah hospital, Ron Knummer. He said that the surgery "does not mean there is a deterioration in Sharon's health," whose condition is still "serious but stable."

Defiant Taylor pleads not guilty to war crimes

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE—IN HIS FIRST appearance before a special international tribunal, Charles G. Taylor, the former Liberian president, pleaded not guilty to 11 counts of war crimes Monday after refusing to recognize the court's jurisdiction and accusing it of meddling in the region's affairs.

"I think this is an attempt to divide and rule the people of Liberia and Sierra Leone and so most definitely I am not guilty," Taylor said amid tight security at a packed hearing before the UN-backed Special Court for Sierra Leone.

"I did not and could not have commuted these acts against the sister republic of Sierra Leone," said Taylor, who was arrested while trying to flee Nigeria last Wednesday and sent

Taylor seemed defiant and at times upbeat, blowing a kiss to members of his family in the courtroom and flashing a wide grin. During the brief proceeding he stared down the chief judge, Richard Lussick of Samon, forcing him to ask three times if Taylor understood the charges against him.

Eventually Taylor said he did, and then argued that as "Liberia's 21st president," the court held no jurisdiction over him. New York Times News Service

Astronomers spot alcohol cloud 463-B km long

PARIS-ASTRONOMERS SAY THEY HAVE sported a cloud of alcohol in deep space that measures 463 billion km across, a finding that could shed light on how giant stars are formed from primordial gas. The vast bridge-shaped cloud of methyl alcohol has been spotted in a region of our galaxy, the Milky Way, that is called W3(OH), where stars are being formed by the gravitational collapse of concentrations of gas and dust, the discoverers said in a press release.

Methanol, an organic (carbon-based) molecule, is a cousin of ethanol, which is found in alcoholic beverages. Methanol is not suitable for human consumption.

The cloud was spotted by astronomers based at Britain's Jodrell Bank Observatory led by Lisa Harvey-Smith. Their work was to be presented on Tuesday at a meeting in Leicester, central England, of the Royal Astronomical Society (RAS).

Scholars who combed through Austrian archives for an exhibition opening Tuesday on Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's later years in Vienna found evidence that he was solidly upper-crust and lived the good life.

Although letters show that Mozart repeatedly borrowed money from friends to pay for his travels and his social obligations, and that his family was forced to move at least 11 times, documents on display at Vienna's presingious Musikverein reveal that he earned about 10,000

The exhibition, which runs through June 30, is part of a year of special events in Austria celebrating the 250th anniversary of the composer's birth in Salzburg on Jan. 27, 1756. Mozart lived in Vienna from 1784-87, at the height of his brief but prolific music career. Among the works he composed in the Austrian capital was "The Mar-1 riage of Figaro."

Olympic chief backs POC stand

Assures Cojuangco of IOC support in his row with BAP; vital Fiba meeting up

general assembly last June.

The POC move did not sit well with the international basketball federation. (Piba), which banned the Philippunes from international caging last year.

With Cojuangeo during the meeting were POC vice president and Bacolod Rep. Monico Puentevella, secretary general Steve Hontiveros and legal counsel Ding Tanjuatco. It was held on the sidelines of the Association of National Olympic Committee 15th general assembly meeting at the Hotel Intercontinental Grand Ball- Cojuangoo. room here.

Comangeo said Rogge virtually upheld the right of an NOC to discipline and punish a member in backing the POC in its row with the BAP

To help solve the problem, Cojuangen said Rogge had tapped his right-hand man, Pere Miro, to look into the issue, which the IOC head said he had already heard about.

"I hope we can find a solution (to the basketball controversy) here," said

Still, a lot depended on a meeting between Cojuangco's group and Fiba secretary general Patrick Baumann later in the day. The meeting would tackle the approval of the new basketbail group, called Pilipinas Basketball, which four of the five Fiba-mandated major stakeholders had crafted.

Another meeting with representing tives of the four stakeholders from the PBA, PBL, UAAP and NCAA is schell? uled later in the day.

We are getting there, says grateful Peping

By ALS. Mendozz

SEOUL—EVEN AS THE REAL BATTLE HAS yet to be fought, if not finally won, Jose "Peping" Cojuangco Jr. said yesterday he strongly felt the Philippine Olympic movement had already scored a victory of sorts.

"The meeting with Mr. Rogge (Jacques) was already a victory for Olympism," said Cojuangco, the president of the Philippine Olympic Committee (POC). "My admiration for the guy has deepened all the more after having met with him even for only about 45 minutes or less."

Among others, Cojuangeo tabled the nagging basketball conflict in his first-ever meeting with Rogge, the charismatic president of the International Olympic Committee, yesterday at the plush Intercontinental Hotel here

Rogge, the 64-year-old Belgian IOC president, is guest of the Anoc (Association of National Olympic Committee) Conference comprising 203 countries where Cojuangoo, as POC press dent, is the Philippines' head delegate.

Also in the delegation was Ding Tanjuatco, POC legal counsel, who played a key role in expounding the merits of ending the rift besetting Philippine basketball in the rare audience with Rogge.

In the closed door meeting with Rogge, a doctor of medicine who was recently made a Count by the King of Belgium, Cojuangco not-

"I'm grateful, indeed, for his having accorded us an audience. His pledge of an allout support to our baskethall cause does not only warm the heart but, more importantly, gives us more reason to bring Philippine basketball back on the world stage."

While admitting that obstacles may yet amper, if not delay further, the Philippines bid here to have the Fiba lift the country's basketball suspension, Cojuangeo said the Frank Elizalde-insugated entry of Rogge into the issue was "the best thing" that ever happened since the basketball row hit the coun-

The Giants, on the other hand, tangle with Air21 in the second game. The Express are riding high on a 113-100 win against Sta. Lucia in Calabagan, isabela, over the weekend.

We unkered with people coming off the bench and so far, it has produced wonders for us," said Purefoods coach Ryan Gregorio following victories over the Bulls and the Alaska Aces.

On both occasions, Gregorio's shock-troopers

Richard Yee led the charge of the Purefoods bench in the Red Bull game, drilling in his biggest output since registering a career-high 23 points during the 2001 Commissioner's Cup.

The 6-foot-4 former UST Growling Tiger went five of seven from the field and made nine of his 11 charities to finish with 19 points and lead the Giants to their forath win in six games.

Before that, it was Marc Pingris who started for Purefoods' reserves, scoring heavily in the first half of a 91-73 rout of the Aces to lock off a winning run that the Giants hope to stretch to three games when they face the Express.

Also providing spark off the bench was Eugene Tejada, a journeyman who never made an impact for either San Miguel or Alaska prior to his Pure-foods stint. Tejada has transformed into an added offensive threat to complement James Yap and Kerby Raymundo.

The challenge for these guys is to play consistendy at all times," said Gregorio. "The stanters are always there but the players coming off the bench have been giving us different looks every game."

The Tigers are hoping to snap a two-game slide that followed a 4-0 start. They fell prey to the Talk N Text Phone Pals in bumiliating fashion, 100-82, and dropped an 84-81 thriller to a victory-hungry Barangay Ginebra Kings.

Red Bull is struggling for a semblance of consistency this conference. The Bulls have been on and off, splitting their six assignments so far for an even 3-3 record. The Express (3-4) are hoping for a victory that will allow them to dislodge the June Navarro Bulls from solo third place.

I beg to disagree. To start with, as I write this, Garduce and Abenojar are already gearing up for the climb. As of April 3, GMA reported that their bet Garduce, who has a few days' headstart over Abenojar, was already at base camp.

The FPMEE is not scheduled to make the a climb until 2007. The group will be divided a into two, with one taking the north route, the other the south.

I've seen so many TV documentanes and read volumes of printed matter on Mt. Everest expeditions to presume that the climb is a racing contest. There are so many factors and forces to contend with on the way to the top (which are too scary to mention), just getting there should be the climbers' primary objective.

As ABS-CBN segment producer Jake Aspiras said, she will be praying for all three groups because whoever gets there first, "Pilipmas pa rin po ang panalo."

The slit-eyed, wide-mouthed NSA president is at it again.

He has been bragging to a fellow scribe that his group will emerge victorious after the April 4 meeting between the POC/basketball stakeholders and Fiba sec gen Patrick Baumann in South Korea.

He's ready to claim credit for the Fiba's "expected" seal of approval for Pilipinas Basketball. He said it was his enormous influence that made this happen. He was, so sure it would happen.

Of course, by now we should know if Mr. Bragadoccio knows whereof he speaks.

But if I were him, maybe it would be prudent to keep a low profile, or to be absolutely quiet about it. It's not nice for a person—who practically killed a popular sport because of his poor leadership—to be talking too much.

Philippine Pootball Federation VP Tony Chua is very excited about the forthcoming World Cup of Football. Playing with a sprained ankle, Baguion dustered 10 points in the stretch to bail out the Montaña Jewels, 60-58, over Rain or Shine yesterday for the lead in the PBL Unity Cup at the FEU Gym.

"I didn't know Proilan would step up," said coach Nel Parado, after the Jewels rolled to their fourth straight win. "Who would have thought he'd play that well? It was a big game for him."

Sidelined in his last game, the 5-foot-8 Baguion, who twisted his ankle early in a win over Magnolia on Sunday, finished with a teamhigh 14 points and seven assists. The Elasto Painters absorbed their first loss to slin to 3-1 for second place, in a tie with Toyota Oris which scored a 72-69 overtime decision over the TeleTech Titans in the second game. Boyet Bautista shot seven of his 13 points in extra time to lead the the Sparks, who posted their second win in a row. Baguion opened his scoring tear by completing a three-point play to level the game for the last time at 53, with 2:48 remaining. Heading into the final minute, Baguion buried a three-pointer and sailed inside for a layup to keep the Jewels on top, $8-53.

Baguion gave the Jewels more breathing rount by making two charities, 60-55, heading into the final 39 seconds. The Painters failed to convert in their final play after a Junjun Cabatu triple had ended scoring for the Painters.

A BIGGER CHAMPION'S PURSE PLUS AUTO-

matic berths in next year's starting field are up for grabs in the 2006 Tour Pilipinas-Paciyak Pinoy, which has been moved to May 11-21.

The organizing Dynamic Solutions Inc. (Dos-I) and event presenter Tanduay Rhum, in cooperation with Wow Magic Sing, sweetened the Tour's cash pot as part of their commitment to make the annual summer spectacle more exciting.

"We're promising a bigger, better and more exciting race this time," declared DOS-I president Gay Cayton during the formal launching of the Padyak Pinoy at the PSA Rorum yesterday at the Pantalan Restaurant in Marula.

Cayton was joined in the public sports program sponsored by Pageor and Marsin Mayor Lito Atienza by Philippine National Cycling Association president Paquito Rivas, Tanduay advertising manager Larry Li, Magic Sing's Rey Lapis and the captains of the 10 competing teams.

Defending champion Warren Davadilla expressed readiness to win a third Tour title, which will be worth P150,000 this time with Cossack Vodka, Air21 and Red Bull as major backers.

"I have really prepared hard for this," Davadilla, also the 1998 winner who edged Frederick Pe-ficiano and Rhyan Tanguilig for the title last year. Davadilla won P100,000 last year, apart from his share as a member of the champion team Colt 45 squad, which bagged P700,000.

Members of the winning team, the first three individual finishers and the top rookie, will be seeded to the 2007 edition of the Tour. Rivas recommended the Tour's change of dates from April 20-30 to give local government units time to repair major roads where the 80 cydists will pass through.

The event is set for 10 laps and covers 1,666 kilometers over 11 days.

Stick-up: Old Mexican steak priced like gold

NOW COMES THE CHARGE THAT MEXIço's Oscar Larios, labeled as recycled old meat, is grossly overpriced.

But before everything else, a word from our sponsor. Here's Peter Musngi of ABS-CBN: "For the record, nothing's final or official yet as far as ticket pricing for the Manny Pacquiao-Oscar Larios fight is concerned. We're still in the process of research. The choice of Araneta Coliseum itself as fight venue is not yet final. Our main concern here is the general public, the great horde of Pacquiao faits to whom Manny is dedicating the event."

Musngi says he hunself got bothered after word came out that ringside tickets for the fight would fetch as much as $1,000 each, with a choked space in the general admission section, the so-called nose-bleed area, to cost a cool P1,000. "We're still studying everything, and rest assured that profit is the least of our concern here," continues Musngi, his firm's trusted impresario. "We are here to bring the best, serve the public."

For sure, there would no repeat of the tragic stampede that had resulted in the trampling and death of over 70 people, a tragedy that led ABS-CBN to be charged with negligence.

Of course, it goes without saying there would be no riotous hordes if tickets are NOT pegged within the reach of the poor general public.

BARE EYE

Upon learning of the agitation, Manny Pacquiao informed broadcaster Ronnie Nathanielsz that he would bat for the slashing of the bleacher tickets by half the announced price.

Still that would be a cool 9500-way, way beyond the weekly table budget of poor Juan de la Cruz.

Anyway, it's hard to detract from the fact that our dear brothers from the slums, where Pacquiao draws his biggest number of admirers and devotees, would beg and borrow just to be able to see their idol do battle live.

No need to wonder anymore why Pacquiao's impact on the poorest of the poor hereabouts has turned narcotic.

Now, what about Larios, did they have to pay him $450,000 just to square and the Filipino fight fans to be shortoff with the Pacman?

"It's a stick-up, he's not even a world champion and champions get a lot less than that," protested sportsman Rudy Salud through Nathanielsz.

Nathamelsz said Salud, founding secretary general of the World Boxing Council, turned livid because, with the announced Larios price tag, poor Pinoy boxing fans would end up being bled dry by promoters.

Told to slow down after confinement due to heart trouble, Salud said he could not sit back and relax while his poor countrymen are being pushed against the ground.

Well, the clearer call here is for event organizers to check on whose dirty pocket the bigger bulk of the Larios purse would

There's strong reason to suspect criminal undercutung, as had happened when Pacquiao was victimized by Murad Muhammad, his former promoter.

Will ABS-CBN, which bankrolls the event (reportedly to the tune of P200 million) allow Murad's talkative ghost to resurface in Manila?

'06 Hall of Fame class

INDIANAPOLIS-CHARLES BARKLEY AND DOmanique Wilkins, two of the NBA's great forwards, and Sandro Gamba, a longtime coach who led Italy to the silver medal at the 1980 Olympics, were among six people Monday to join the Baskerbali Hall of Fame.

The rest of the class consists of Joe Dumars, who played on the Detroit Pistons championship teams in the late 1980s and helped them win another title in 2004 as team president; University of Connecticut women's coach Geno Auriemma and Dave Gavitt, who produced eight straight 20-win seasons as coach of Providence University and helped establish the Big East Conference. Gavitt was elected as a contributor.

"Charles and I go back since college," Wilkins said. "None of us thought this would happen, we just wanted to play basketball. This is the highest honor that can ever be paid."

Gamba has coached European basketball for more than three decades, coached four straight Italian Olympic teams from 1980-92 and won a silver medal at the Moscow Olympics in 1980. AP e MBA on TV

UCLA, which shot only 36 percent for the game and was outscored by Florida's bench 15-4, was peced by sophomore guard Jordan Parmer with 18 points.

Parmer had 12 first-half points on five-of-eight shooting from the floor but he was the Brums' only threat as the rest shot a horrid three-for-19.

UCLA (32-7) falls to 11-2 in NCAA championship games, its only other loss a 59-54 loss to Louisville in Indianapolis in 1980.

The defensive-minded Bruins entered the game riding a 12-game winning streak having yielded more than 60 points only once.

*Usually, the team that makes the most mistakes is going to be on the wrong side of the win/loss colurnn," said UCIA coach Ben Howland. "Credit Florida. They were terrific. This was their night."

The Bruins also had no strategy to stop Noah. The 6-foot-11 (2.1-meter) Noah had five blocks by halftime, already one better than the championship record set by Arizona's Loren Woods in 2001, and he finished with 29 for the tournament,

The Hills Have Eyes

Directed by Alexandre Aja

Stars Aaron Stanford, Ted Levine, Kathleen

Wes Craven's 1970s slasher cult classic is revisited. A clueless family wanders into an atomic wasteland and is terrorized by a clan of murderous mutants. Erin Meister of the Boston Globe calls it a "giddy and horrifying remake ...

fusion of blood and body parm... surprisingly artful." Bob Longino of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution begs to differ, though: "[It] likes its violence pientiful and intense... there are ax-ings, a crucifixion-style torching, gunshots and explosions... sometimes it works; sometimes it's just horror-movie overkill."

Bandidas

Stars Penelope Cruz, Salma Hayek, Steve Zahn, Sam Shep-

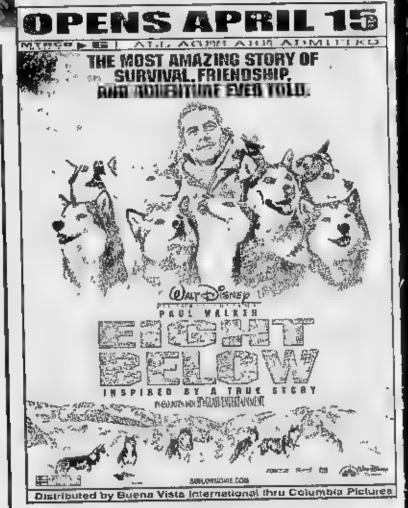

Directed by Joachim Roenning and Espen Sandberg

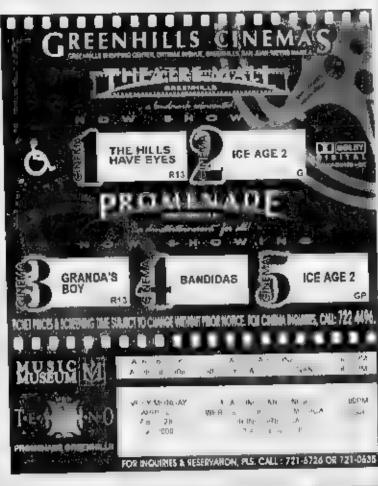

A savvy aristocrat (Cruz) and a tempestuous farm girl (Hayek) reluctantly team up as a Latina version of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" in this $60-milion production. They rob banks and battle with a ruthless enforcer. Cruz tells the press: "Salma and I were very excited when we read the funny script." Vince Leo of the good news was relayed to him by his mother Arlene Belle Lopez, who had learned it via a text message from Solito.

"We made the movie for a contest a year ago and until now, it is still winning awards," Lopez gushed.

He credited Cruz with a large part of his own triumph

Lopez recounted. "He told me when I should do more, or less, in each scene. He taught me how to increase the volume of my voice and how to walk like a gay boy."

Cruz, for his part, insisted that Lopez was an apt student

"I am very pleased that he won," Cruz said. "He was very open to instructions, and absorbed tips quickly."

Since Lopez is straight and comes from a Born Again Christian family, Cruz noted, the boy

Nathan was a good student and 'very open' to directions, Soliman recalls was "at first resistant" about playing the flamboyant Maxi.

It was to Lopez's credit that he eventually overcame this, said Cruz, who used to teach children's theater 171 St. Scholastica's and Assumption

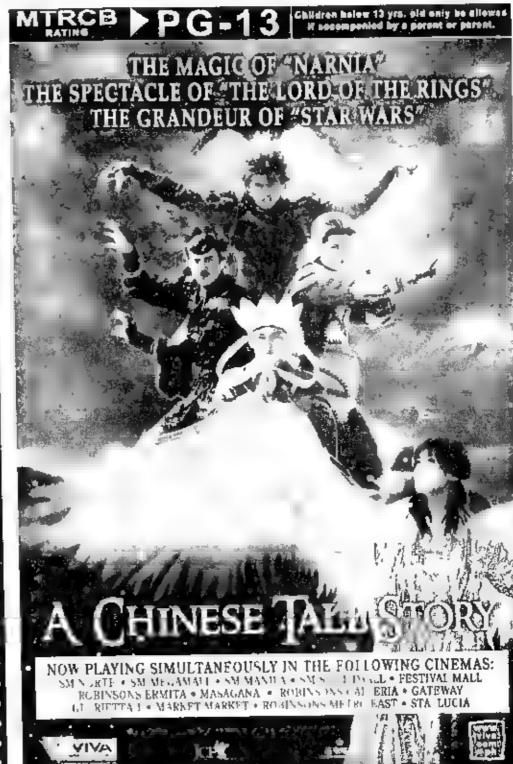

"I told him that an actor's job involves the quest for truth It was my task to open up his mind."

Exactly now did he achieve this?

"I told him that Maximo symbolized femininity, sensitivity and the nurturing maternal instinct in a family of tough guys, Max mo was a balancing, stabilizing force in his father and brother's lives."

Lopez, who guested on the ABS-CBN soap opera "Mga Anghel na Walang Langit," admitted that his fear of being typecast in gay roles is the primary reason behind his present dream of making action movies

He quipped, "Just like Neo, Keanu Reeves in The Matrax."

H'wood hunting for films

(This is a condensed version of a story that will appear in today's New York Times.)

LOS . ANGELES-With movie theater ticket sales in the United States down again in 2005, more Hollywood studios are looking to the emerging markets for local-language films

Last year, the Walt Disney Co. entered into a joint venture to make its first Chinese language film, which will be released there later thus year. In January, Twentieth Century Pox, a unit of the News Corp., scored high in Brazil with the Portuguese-language comedy "If ! Were You."

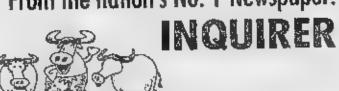

Sony Pictures Entertainment, along with Warner Brothers Entertainment, is a leader in local-language production and is making films in India, Russia and Mexico in 2006. And recently, Tom Preston, chief executive of Viacom, which Paramount Pictures, said he, too, was eager to make movies in India.

Decrease

One reason the studios are looking overseas is that movie-going abroad is growing faster than in the United States. In 2005, the worldwide box office tallied $23.24 billion, a decrease of 79 percent from 2004. The American box office represented $8.99 billion, or 39 percent, of that total.

What studio executives are hoping to find is that rare gem that crosses local borders and becomes a hit in the United States or, better yet, worldwide. NY Times News Service

Read it every Sunday with the Philippine Daily Inquirer.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand-Actor Russell Crowe is under a cloud in his country of birth for allegedly smoking while singing at clubs with his new band despite New Zealand's ban on cigarettes in public venues.

Oscar-winning Crowe, 41, allegedly lik up in two clubs and a concert hall during his threeconcert tour of the country with his new folkrock band The Ordinary Fear of God.

The country's Smoke-Pree Environments Amendment Act bans smoking in bars, restaurants and casinos and all other indoor public

Last year, a New York court gave Crowe a conditional discharge after he pleaded guilty to throwing a phone at a hotel receptionist.

Pitt stop

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic-Brad Pitt visited the Dominican Republic this week to scout real estate development locations.

The actor took a helicopter to the Samana peninsula, on the island's north coast, and the eastern towns of Miches and Punta Cana to look into real estate projects with art dealer and promoter George Nader.

It was not clear what kind of project Pitt was exploring.

He was photographed Friday afternoon following a meeting with German architects Lars Kruckeberg and Wolfram Putz at a hotel in the capital's colonial district. The architects had previously refurbished Pitt and girlfriend Angelina Jolie's house in Los Angeles.

The couple are expecting their first child later this year.

P1.1T needed for infra projects

THE COUNTRY NEEDS P1.1 TRILLION ($21.25 billion) in fresh investments starting this year to 2010 to unclog infrastructure bottlenecks, the National Economic and Development Authority said. Documents presented by Beonomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri to the global donor community during the recent Philippine Development Forum estimated this cost of investments needed to shore up the country's vital transportation, power, water, communications and social infrastructure in the next five years.

Neri identified which sectors and geographical areas should be prioritized to attain the country's medium-term development plan and Malacañang's 10-point agenda. He likewise listed the possible sources of financing, including the extent of government intervention.

He said the thrust was to encourage the private sector to undertake projects "with positive financial and economic returns" while the government would focus on "essential projects with high economic returns despite poor financial viability."

But to maintain fiscal discipline, the government plans to focus on projects that will not burden it with contingent habilities and encourage participation from local government units whenever feasible.

The total investments needed, equivalent to about 2.87-3.14 percent of gross domestic product, included vital projects inside and outside the medium-term plan amounting to P540.21 billion and PS48.47 billion, respectively.

Of the total amount required for infrastructure spending over the five-year period, the national government was expected to shed out P171 56 billion out of its budget and another P108 98 billion outside the budget, on top of its contribution to joint-venture pro-P1 IT NEEDED/ B2

"With the installation of four cranes, the annual port capacity of the container terminals (in Subic) would increase to 100,000 TEUs," Peliciano said.

The official said SBMA bought the cranes through an agreement with Penta-Ocean Construction Co.

The acquisition was made possible under a loan package from the Japan Bank for International Cooperation.

SBMA is implementing the Subic Bay Port Development Project. It involves the construction of modern container terminals, two berths measuring 280 meters long and 13 meters deep as well as the installation of four

Aside from the container ports, the port modernization project also has a grain terminal that would cater to non-containenzed cargoes, mainly bulk grain shipments.

The official said more shipping companies would be attracted to do business in the country with the provision of containerized and non-contamerized cargo handling facilities in

PBP completes Szopad's 526 'Bridges of Hope'

THE 526 STEEL BRIDGES PROGRAMMED for construction in the Special Zone for Peace and Development (Szopad) have been fully completed nine months ahead of schedule and with steel materials savings good for 50 more bridges.

This was the report to President Macapagal-Arroyo of Public Works and Highways Secretary Hermogenes Ebdane Jr., chair of the President's Bridge Program and PBP executive director Emil Sadain.

The UK government assisted bridge project, which covered the entire island of Mindanao, was started in July 2001 in response to the demand of ARMM neighboring provinces and cities for infrastructure support. Some 526 Szopad "Bridges of Hope" would provide residents in these areas wider access to govemment services.

"PRP is one responsive program of the government that has been implemented with fidelity to time target and costing. Since it started, it has proceeded with no cost overruns incurred, accomplished ahead of schedule and with bridge materials savings good for 50 more bridges," said Ebdane.

Former President Fidel V. Ramos started the PBP during his term as a parallel intervention to fast track the development of infrastructure particularly in areas newly opened for agricultural production.

The prefabricated modular steel panels used for the PBP were supplied by Mabey & Johnson, sole manufacturer in the UK of the latest state of the art processed prefabricated modular steet bridges materials.

than the locals," said Marcelo Ayes, chief forign exchange dealer at Equitable PCIBank.

"We're looking at 50.50:$1 (as the next target) on strong remittances ahead of tuition payments (starting this month)," said Jonathan Ravelas, chief strategist at Banco de Oro Universal Bank.

OFW remattances are seasonally strong in the months of April and May in time for tumon payments for the school year which starts in June.

Ayes said the recent peso uptrend looked sustainable and that the next key barriers would be at 50.80 and 50,50

The peso likewise benefited from a strong regional currency market after the US dollar fell due to weak manufacturing data in the world's biggest economy.

The peso broke into the 50:$1 level for the first time this year last March 7 on the strong influx of foreign portfolio investments. At that time, the market suspected that the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas was starting to intervene to stem the peso's sharp appreciation by buying dollars from the spot foreign exchange market.

Ayes said the market was perked up by expectations that the government's main revenue-collecting agencies-the bureaus of Internal Revenue and of Customs-likely met their collection targets for March. He explained that the Brady bond buyback likewise sent positive signals because it meant that the government was now in a stable fiscal position to afford the prepayment of these bonds, some of which would mature in 2018.

"That's why interest rates are likewise going down," he said.

Projects planned to be undertaken through public-private partnership were expected to amount to nearly PS00 billion.

Of the total investments required, the transportation sector was expected to gobble up the lion's share at P567 56 billion, mostly for Metro Mamla.

The power sector was estimated to require P295.05 billion, of which about P109 93 bil hon would go to projects in Luzon, P85.86 bil lion in Mindanao and P58.16 billion in Visayas.

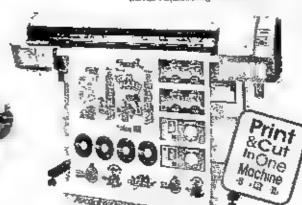

The requirements of the water sector were estimated at P186.82 billion, mostly for Metro Manila, and of other social infrastruc ture, at P43.85 billion.

The basic thrusts of all the infrastructure projects envisioned for the Philippines were to bring the people into the "development mainstream," decongest Metro Manila and provide safety nets especially in conflict-at fected areas in Mindanao. Doris C. Dumlao

Mystery buyer, Equitable terms

AFTER WEEKS OF BACKROOM talks, innumerable phone calls and calculated media leaks, the mystery buyer of Equitable PCIBank yesterday submitted a "formal binding" offer of P20.5 billion on the SM Banco de Oro block as requested.

The Siguion Reyna Montecillo & Ongsiako law firm gave the written commitment after the SM-BDO counsel, Herrera Teehankee Faylona & Cabrera, expressed reservation on the "statement of interest" that Signion Reyna had earher submitted.

Today, incidentally, is the original deadline given by Siguion Reyna's unnamed principal for SM BDO to accept its "statement of interest" on the 215.9 million shares that the family of taipan Henry Sy Sz. holds in Equitable PCIBank.

Globe cautious on '06 prospects

Ayala telco says industry faced with single-digit sales growth

By Daxim L. Lucas

AYALA-OWNED GLOBE TELEcom Inc. will likely report a modest improvement in revenue and earnings this year as the company continues to struggle with the weakening demand for mobile pfibne services.

At the same time, the company announced plans to borrow up to $150 million this year to help it pay off maturing loans and take advantage of lower interest rates.

Globe's conservative performance estimate already marks an improvement over its performance for 2005 when its net income declined 9 percent from the previous year.

"We will see single-digit growth for revenues industry wide," Globe president and CEO Gerardo Ablaza told reporters in a briefing Tuesday. "Our net income will result from that."

Ablaza declined to give specific revenue and income targets although most stock analysts expect the company to earn anywhere from P11.5 billion to P13 standing. billion this year from last year's P10,3 billion.

Globe is the country's secondlargest telecommunications firm in terms of revenue and market share, trailing industry leader PLDT, which owns Smart Comnunications Inc. and Pilipino Telephone Corp.

The Globe chief noted, however that a single-digit growth in revenues would not automatical ly translate to modest earnings growth as well, since the company was also looking for ways to reduce costs—the other factor that determines a firm's net in-

This doesn't mean we'll see the same [level of] growth in profits," he said, noting that the company has, in fact, begun to show a pattern of improvement in quarterly financial reports. This was especially true during the fourth quarter of 2005 when the company reported recordhigh quarterly revenues, weak overall performance notwith-

Ablaza said the company was reexamining several of its marketing programs to determine which ones were effective.

"We want to prevent a repeat of expensive programs like the (subscriber identification module) awapping, which was very expensive but didn't result in good subscriber quality," he said, adding that terminating the program has saved Globe about P100 million a month.

The company's cautious approach toward its 2006 financial prospects echoes a similar statement made in Pebruary by its arch rival, although PLDT chairman Manuel V. Pangilinan has already shed some of his caution after noting his company's strong performance in the first quarter.

Ablaza noted that Globe has also turned in a good performance for the first quarter of 2006, but warned that "two data points don't make a trend."

At the briefing—as well as during the stockholders' meeting that preceded it-company officials struggled to explain the company's more conservative stance vis-à-vis its competitors, especially in bringing new technologies to the marker as well as the adopting of innovative marketing and pricing schemes.

In terms of new technologies like the third-generation mobile phone network, Ablaza explained that the scheme was still in its infancy, adding that he expected current technology to be present for up to 15 years before it is overtaken by a newer standard.

During the briefing, Globe chief financial officer Delfin Gonzalez said he was readying financing options of between $100 million to $150 million for this year, some of which would be borrowed in pesos.

The company has maturing obligations of $148 million this year, he said.

We are now entertaining proposals [from bankers]," he said. We want some of them in peros and at cheaper rates."

THE PHILIPPINES TRIMMED ITS CONSOLAdated public sector deficit to only P106 billion at end-2005, or P74.3 billion better than the target set, due to the improved fiscal position of the national government and major stateowned corporations.

The CPSD for 2005 accounted for 2 percent of gross domestic product and represented a 54.3 percent improvement from the P231.96 billion posted the previous year, the Department of Finance reported yesterday.

The government corporate sector exceeded its own deficit targets. Fourteen monitored non-financial public enterprises reduced their borrowings by P21.7 billion versus the projected level of P42.5 bidion.

Social security institutions generated a total surplus of P51.8 billion for the period, with the Government Service Insurance System posting a surplus of P31.4 billion due to confinuing reforms.

The Social Security System likewise posted a surplus of P14.7 billion due to an increase in members' contributions, which enabled revenues to exceed benefit payouts for the first time in six years.

Local government units likewise performed better during the year, chalking up a preliminary cash surplus of P13 billion for the Government financial institutions, including the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipmas, also generated a surplus of P6.2 billion as earnings from an expanded loan portfolio offset the cost of paying higher dividends paid to the government. In the past, the National Power Corp. always weighed down the CPSD. But the govextiment has begun privatizing some of its assets. Now, the state utility has improved its fiscal performance dramatically.

The International Monetary Fund, in its latest report on the Philippines, said it would be good to set a deficit ceiling for each corporation to improve individual governance.

Right now, the source said the price difference between the regional benchmark Dubai crude, and diesel based on the Mean of Platts Singapore benchmark for refined petroleum products, was pegged at around $20 a barrel.

While it was smaller in February, at aimost $15 a barrel, the present difference is still a fairly sizeable margin-enough for Shell to consider expanding its refinery here instead of shutting it down, the source said.

The source explained that in recent that public offering now hunges on

Campi presents 2nd Manila auto show

ON APRIL 28, 2005, THE FIRST MANILA MOtor Show organized by event manager Worldbex Services International had a highly successful grand opening at the World Trade Center on Roxas Boulevard in Manila. Tomorrow morning, Worldbex's second motor show will be opened to the public at the same venue, this time with a new title—the Manila International Auto Show (MIAS)—and under the officia, auspices of the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines Inc.

(Campi)

In deciding to endorse the MIAS, Campi—which counts among its members all the carmakers doing business in the Phiappines except Ford—must have considered the history of the automobile industry here. As pointed out by award winning motion-cars com writer Jason Ang, in the years after World War II, the Philippines became an attractive venue for foreign investments, including Japanese firms that sought to expand their markets by establishing factories here

Sizzling Sakata success

IN MY YEARS OF DEALING WITH Japanese automotive executives both here and abroad, I noticed that they have virtually one thing in common, they have stuck to their first jobs.

Ryo Sakata is the latest dude to fit the bill

I like people who value loyalty. They are assets, friends through thick and thin.

I met the dapper Sakata-san, the president of Tri Petch Isuzu Sales Co. Ltd of Thailand, during the 27th Bangkok International Motor Show through Timmy Naval. Timmy, of course, is the friendliest at the Isuzu Philippine Corp. (ask Ronald "L" Baladad). Art Balmadrid only knows too well that in Timmy, he has a powerhouse front-act in the mold of Toyota's Ariel de Jesus, Honda's Tin Tin Reyes, Jaguar's Dino Directo, BMW's Maricar Parco, Nissan's Raymond Tribdino, Volvo's Lot Concepcion and Lyn Manalansang-Buena and Mitsubishi's Arlan Reyes.

"Sir, I'd like you to meet the Main Man of Isuzu Thailand, Mr. Ryo Sakata," said Timmy as she ushered me, rather gingerly, to Sakata.

Sakata-san struck me as extremely humble amid his smashing, sizzling success as the Isuzu top gun of Thailand, the booming as always Southeast Asian country described by Ms Panatda Chennavasin as the "Pickup Capital of the World." That is so because Isuzu has been No. 1 in sales of trucks and pickups the last 23 years in Thailand. What a feat, indeed!

After his university studies in 1971, Sakata, then only 21, started working at Mitsubishi. Mitsubishi, as you know, is a majority owner of Isuzu. After 15 years at Mitsubishi, Sakata was moved to Isuzu and, for the next 15 years, he established himself as an outstanding force at Isuzu's sales surge of trucks and pickups. In 1988, he was made chief of Isuzu's Project Planning Department Nine years later, he was promoted chief of corporate planning in Tri Perch Isuzu Sales in Thailand before getting transferred to Zambia where he stayed four years.

"It's in Zambia where I got to really polish my English," said Sakata, who despite his denials, speaks fluent English in spite of the absence of formal education of Shakespeare's language

FULL TANK

"There is no small job. If you do your best, every job becomes big"

Then on Dec. 30, 2004, Sakata was made vice president of Tri Petch. So rapid was his advance that in April 2005, he was finally installed president of Tri Petch.

"Trust has always been the key to success of any man, any business," said Sakata. "Me and my staff, we trust each other Isuzu and our customers, we trust each other. Mit subish and Isuzu, they trust each other Isuzu's success in Thailand in the last 23 years is described in just one word—trust. Without trust, we have nothing."

Sakata, 57, plays tennis and golf
"I play to a 20 handicap," he said of his golf. "It relaxes me a lot."
Tennis makes me sweat."

Any other key to success, aside from trust, Sakata-san?

"Always do your best in whatever you do," he said. "There is no small job. If you do your best, every job becomes big."

OVERLOADING. I saw a truck overloaded with plywood collapse at the service road of the South Expressway on March 31, triggering an early morning monstrous jam since most of the piles of wood fell over on SLEX. Things like that don't happen anymore at North Luzon Expressway, thanks to Ping de Jesus determined effort to ban overloaded trucks at NLE.

AN IMPRESSIVE COLLECTION OF more than 50-trend setting contemporary show cars as well as meticulously restored classic and vintage milestone cars will be featured at Trans Sports Show. These cars are the main crowd drawer of the event and all of them w.l. compete in the Trans Sport Show Cup open class car competition.

The show is all set to unfold on April 26. It is scheduled until April 30 at the Megatrade Hall of SM Megamal. B, Orngas Center, EDSA, Mandaluyong City.

Love affair with the auto

Show organizer TradeShow International Inc. believes that with the success goes the responsibility to continuously educate and entertain its loyal followers and also, the new breed of car enthusiasts with an informative-filled motoring event.

Some more notable car entries this year are a 1969 Ford Mustang Mach 1 from last year's Best of Show winner Alex Isip; 1978 Perrari 308 GTB from Automagic; 1958 Mercedes Benz 190SL roadster from Erwin Estacio Auto Restoration, 1966 Corvette Stingray coupe from Red 65 Paintnix Auto Restoration, 1957 Ber Air 500 convertible from Route 66: 1956 Porsche 356 Speedster from Autozone; 1951 Mercedes-Benz 220 cabnolet from Alex & Caesar Wongchuking and a 1953 Jaguar XK-120 roadster from DC Autosport.

Trans Sport Show can be credited for improving the level of Filipino craftsmanship in car restoration.

Oldest RP motor club holds auto show

THE AUTOMOBILE Association Philippmes, the country's oldest and most prestigious auto club, marks its 75th anniversary this year with a weeklong calendar of special events culminat ing in the first-ever AAP Auto Show from May 12 to 14, club officials said.

Founded on May 25, 1931, the AAP, formerly the Philippine Motor Association, has been designated as the National Auto Club of the Philippines by former President Elpidio Quirino. It is the only entity in the country that issues internationa. driving permits and competition acenses to race drivers.

Activities

As part of its diamond jubilee celebration, the AAP kicked off its activities on Jan. 26 with the Toyota Road Safety Conference at the Dusit Hotel in Maket Upcoming activities include a Vintage Cars Parade (May 7), Conference on Alternative Fuels (May 8), launch of the UP Road Safety Zone (May 9) and the 1st AAP Invitational Golf Tournament (May 10, Valley Golf and Country Club)

The club will hold a thanksgiving Mass and annual general membership meeting 'on May 11 at The Forum, PICC on Roxas Boulevard, Pasay City, where the AAP auto show will also be held from May 12 to 14. Among the highlights of the show is the Denso Karung Championship on May 13

The AAP auto show will also feature a Galiery of Philippine Motoring, a photo exhibit depicting the history of the AAP and motoring in the Philippines. It will also feature an AAP memorabilia rane that will display a collection of racing cars, racing gears and trophies, among others, of outstanding motorsports personali-prompting officials to bring out the execute excellent tire and engine safety car again from laps seven to nine At the restart, Alonso was able to set a quicker pace from the rest of the field, timing at a consistent pace two seconds faster than anyone else on the racetrack

Michael Schumacher's race came to a vicious end as his Ferrari crashed into a wall bringing out the safety car for the third time, initiating a series of pit stops for the reams trying to gain a strategic advantage.

Another incident involving the Toro Rosso of Tonio Luizzi caused mayhem on the track, bringing out the safety car yet again. All the lead that Alonso was able to establish was crushed because of the interruptions that have happened in the race.

In spite of this, Alonso was able to management skills through the four restarts and throughout the race, which gave him and team Mad Seven Renault a clean run to victory. The Renaults seemed to perform better in heating up the tires, generating more grip on the racetrack. Alonso's drive in the Australian GP was described as perfect for a world champion.

Dominant lead

Team Mild Seven Renault now has a dominant lead in the Constructors points with 42, followed by McLaren with 23 and Ferrari with 15 Defending world champion Fernando Alonso has scored 28 points out of a possible 30 for the driver's enampionship this year. There are 15 more races this season

MOTORING

Music and motors: a soundtrack to driving

IS THERE ANY WAY TO TALK about cars and music and not expiore the concept of the altimate driving song? The discussion and debate about this topic runs you umes: the lasts are quite predictably innumerable. All that really matters is what individually moves us, either emotionally or spiritually, and allows us to enjoy our motoring better.

"Wagner's "Flight of the Valkyrse" may work well for you and your European GT's attempt to more than double the legal speed limit For most mortals though, while the equipment might be a tad more down-market, I can assure you that the effects of a good driving song are just as influentia, and lasting.

First encounter

My first encounter with a drivthe song was Tears for Fears' "Everybody Wants to Rule the World, hearing it for the first time while tooling around the foothills of Honoluci, Hawati in my uncle's early model Hyundai Excel hatch. So profound was the combination of the punchy little hatch, the twisty mountain roads and Roland Orzabal's haunting declaration, "Welcome to your life, there's no turning bacit."

The result has been that the all too familiar looping guitar riff has started a thousand of my own drives, as it never fails to give megoose bumps, continues to bring me back to that summer of '50sstyle drive-up fast food, arcade games at the local pizza joint and inggers memories of a whole iot driving. While I was too young to do the driving myself, the sense of road trip that this song elicits from me is very powerful. My fetish for the hatchback is also probably and quite reluctantly also attributable to this episode of my life

A few years later and behind the wheel of my red 1 3-liter injected Sentra, the anthem would be "Under the Bridge" by the Red Hot Chih Peppers. This tune just worked so well during many late drives from Alabang, so much so that I would cue the song and start the guitar intro just as I merged onto the South Luzon Expressway. The song (is it track No. 11 on the Blood Sugar Sex Magik album?) would get a final reset as I crested

I did this so that I would generally reach the song's crescendo, with the backup chorus blasting, "Under the bridge downtown, if where I drew some blood," just as my sedan began its run on the then ummaculate tarmac of the Guadalupe bridge. The potent combination of the speed and the masterful guitar work of "on and off" Chui's gustar man John Fruscante made me so intoxicated that I kept thinking I could keep up with the Galant Gtl's and Bluebirds that ruled Manila's early '90s streets after midnight. That, of course, never happened

Fourteen summers on and the pattern of memorable experience, reinforced by a good song and an interesting car continues. Up Dharma Down's Fragmented album has its own playlist and is constantly broadcasted off my iPod and its

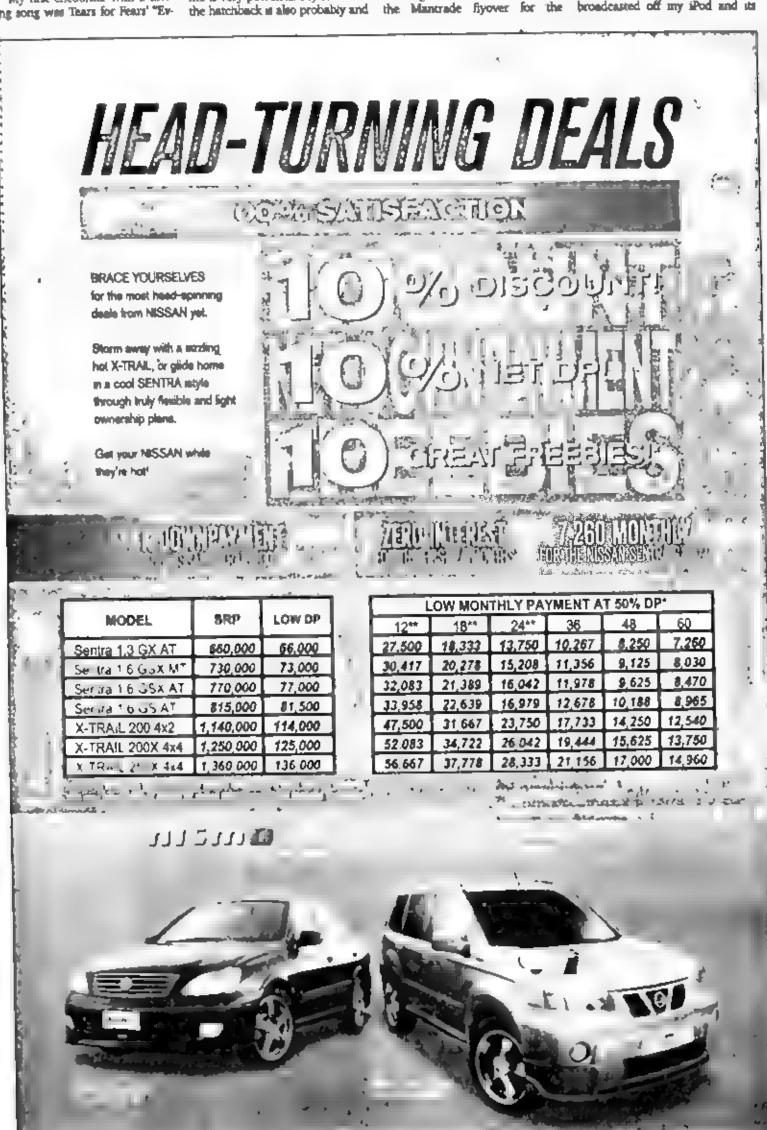

Road Trip. It's just so convenient that the tracks run the garnut of human emotion and driving experiences. "The World Is Our Playground and We Will Always Se Home" and "Hiwaga" help distipate the stress of our chaotic, crowded city streets. The steady beats and the lilting, laid-back vocals have, more than once, kept me from blowing my top and giving in

Controlled aggression

"Pag-Agos" and "June" summon the image of the long, if not lazy, drives that many of us will go through this summer. For the more motivated motorist, who would not want to lap the Subsc or BRC tracks with "Malikmata" or "Maybe" in the background? The building, energetic temper compels one to achieve speed but only in a magner as cohesive and disciplined as the music strelf-a Zenlike emression of controlled aggression. I'll admit to giving in to my age but my Jazz seems to be a meer place after finally being able to get my hands on the disc

Rather than point you in the direction of a specific genre, sub-custure or a particular artist, I ask the readers to find music that works for them. A steady supply of personally affective tunes will go a long way in providing a significant soundtrack to your own driving Someone once suggested that Brit "ashram rockers" Kulashaker and their mantric "Govinda" worked best for them. I just looked her in the eye and said, "Whatever works for you," as I personally prefer driving to "Mystical Machine Gun." Like I've said a million times, whatever moves you-and your drive.

AUSTRALIAN GRAND PRIX Fernando Alonso grabs victory for Renault

PERNANDO ALONSO WAS ABLE to grab victory for Mud Seven Renault Formula One team in the Australian Grand Prix, despite having to endure four safety car periods throughout an actionpacked race

His teammate Giancario Fisichella was able to finish a heroic fifth, after being relegated to last place on the start of the

One crazy race

Alonso described the race in Albert Park, Melbourne as a "little bit crazy"-with numerous incidents happening all across the grid, even before the start of the race, and all the way to the very last lap of the GP.

"I've got to say that this season is already shaping up to be a lot of fun. That was one crazy race, but l enjoyed every lap of it, even though I didn't have a clue what was going on for most of x," Alonso admits

Fisichella had to face an early disappointment as he was forced to start the race from the tail-end of the order after his R26 stalled on the first scheduled race start He had to give up his second place on the starting line, and instead, had to start in the pit-lane.

This opened up an opportunity for Alonso on third place to challenge pole-sitter Jenson Button at the start of the race

"The start was perfect, and I nearly got past Jenson. But I locked my brakes so I had to settle in just behind him for the first lap. We had a good fight though, as I always do with Jenson. He's a tough racer, but he's always very fair. I was disappointed that he fell off so quickly in the race, as it's always more i to have some hard racing with another one of the guys who's willing to put up a fight," the Spanish superstar continues.

Going for the goal

Traction was one of the greatest challenges the racers had to face in Australia. Many teams were struggling for grip on the racetrack. The safety car was deployed after the Ferram of Peape Massa siammed into a wall early in the race. As the track was cleared and the safety car was pulling in at the end of lap three, the restart gave Alonso an opening to dash shead of Button to take the race lead

A few laps later, Christian Klein's Red Bull bit the wall as he was approaching turn nine,

The place: Bicol region, home of majestic Mayon and gentle butanding

How to get there: A frugal traveler can take the 12-hour bus trip from Manua. By air, it takes about 55 minutes to reach Legazoi. Albay, either from Manils or Cebu.

What to bring- it's better to come prepared with extra cash. As an emerging ecotourism destination, Bicol has yet to really regulate the fees of tourist attraction sites and activities. One can always haggle though. Keep smaller denominations for frequent jeepney or tricycle rides. Don't forget to throw in swimming gear, assential gadgets like cell phone and digicam, plus a disposable underwater camera.

What to do: Go on a roung tour of historical landmarks and churches. Join any of the eco-tourism activities and festivals listed in Bigot's official website. Then swim with butanding in Donsoil

What to eat: Anything on the menu of Small Talk Café et Doña Aurora Street in Legazpi. Visit the row of Capitol Annex Outdoor Restaurants.

What to buy: There's an array of very, very affordable abaca products, adorable souverurs, artwork and shirts at Satellite Mar-ket. Buy pill nut delicacies from Albay Central Pr. Nut Candy shop.

Other tips: Travel light but bring an extra lightweight bag for shopping goodles. Most establishments in Albay closs earlier than those in Manila. Try to be up the earliest time possible to meet your it nerary and accomplish all activities. Know the jeepney and tricycle rates. ICOL IS HAVEN TO MANY WONDERful things elusive, especially toward visitors and tourists unfamiliar with the peninsula. Why elusive?

To begin with, a trip to the region from Manila takes a grueling 12-hour bus ride by the frugal traveler, while those coming from the Visayas used to have no other choice except the mandatory Cebu-Manila-Legazpı flight itinerary.

Direct Cebu-Legazpi trips were recently introduced by Air Philippines, along with the airline's Marula-Legazpi flights, to aid Bicol in opening its doors to the Visayas. ABACA bags

Perhaps being the most underdeveloped region is another factor for the province's elusive charm. But only Bi col's rapid emergence as an ecotourism destination could determine whether the rural setup, or the lack of infrastructure, is pride or bane.

The region's abundant natural resources mountains, caves, waterfalls, black sand beaches and marine life. Of these, two promi-nent gems make Bicol distinct from other local eco-tourism hotspots.

One of these is famous for its near-perfect cone, it majestically stands at the center of Albay Province.

Mr. Mayon is visible even from neighboring provinces and looms over the Cagsawa Rums, site of the remains of the volcano's worstrecorded eruption, which has become many a photographers' favorite anapshot of the province.

Thick, stubborn clouds veil Mayon's tip on certain days though, as was the case during this writer's trip to Bicol last month.

After waiting two whole days for a glimpse of the entire mountain, we finally saw it "unveiled" early morning of the last day of the visit.

Getting a view, it turned out was as simple as looking out the window of our room on the topmost floor of Hotel Venezia.

Club Paradise, Dimakya Island, Coron, Palawan

How to get there:

Fly to Busuanga via Asian Spirit or South East Asian Airlines. The trip from Manila will take roughly an hour. Once at the airport, you will board a jeepney and traver through rustic roads that snake through lush green hils. After the 30-minute ride, you will reach the modest pier, and then board an outrigger boat that will finally take you to Club Paradise.

What to bring:

A Smart SIM card. When 2bU, went for a visit, Smart was the only operable telecommunication provider in that part of Palawan.

A waterproof bag. Better to keep your belongings safe and dry while you're off boating or just lounging about in the shore.

An underwater/waterproof camera. Whether you'll be snorkeling about to look for clown fish, or paddling about in a kayak, a waterproof camera is best to capture these fun-filled moments.

Digicam and memory cards to take lots of photos with. Aside from the goods available at the gift shop, photos are the best souvenir from your Palawan trip as collecting seashells and bottling their white powdery sand is damaging to the environment and thus strictly prohibited.

What to do:

A trip to Club Paradise will really let you fee, the glamour of resort living Aside from lounging about and enjoying the sun and sand, relish the wonderfu. Palawan scenery. Club Paradise offers various activities for visitor's enjoyment.

Divel Beginners can go snorkeling at Club Paradise's House Reef It's easily accessible and requires a shore entry off Dimakya Island You will see an abundance of fish, bounuful coral beds and sponges.

There is also a seagrass area which serves as feeding ground for green turtles and dugong or sea cow (which usually appear around June to September)

More experienced divers can choose from a handful of site destinations. The most popular wreck dive site is the Kyokuzan island hop. One must-go-to is the Isla Walang Lang-Aw ("Island with No Trees") A romantic dinner can be set up on the powdery white-sand beach of this enthralling uninhabited island! A lot of marriage proposals have been arranged in this beautiful location!

Maru, a Japanese freighter from World War II. It can be reached by boat in 45 minutes. Dives can be arranged at the Dugong Dive Center.

Another option is the Coron Island Tour, where you will visit the picturesque Cayangan Lake, the Maquinit Hot Springs, and take a trip through the quaint town of Coron

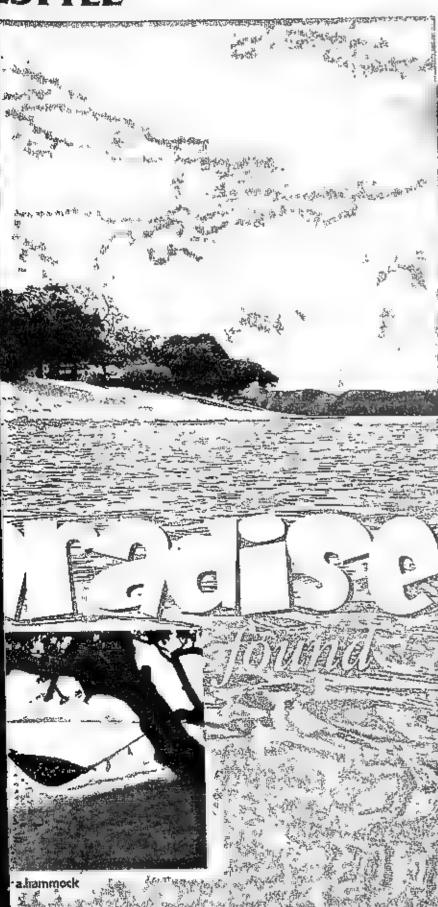

Safari savvy. You arrange a trip to the Calaurt Wildlife Safari Calaurt Island is the Philippines' premiere wildlife safari where various African animals such as giraffes, zebras and impalas, as well as Palawan endemic animals such as mousedeer, Calamian deer and bearcats roam freely. The tour takes about five to six hours, and costs $42 per person.

Resort hop. For the sports enthusiasts, El Rio Y Mar is perfect spot for you. The resort is 20 minutes away by boat from Dimakya Island El Rio Y Mar offers activities such as banana-boat rides, ringo tube, kayaking, watersking and windsurfing, among others. Rates start at $10. You won't find jet skis, however, for the resort is very keen on making sure the natural environment will not be damaged.

I FOUND the end of the rainbow in Palawan!

What to eat:

Club Paradise's Kamalig Restaurant offers a scrumptons buffer. From Filipino food to International fare, you can surely find the perfect dish to suit your palate.

What to buy:

The Sari-Sari gift shop offers interesting Palawan-made handicrafts such as rammakers, wood carvings and such.

Other tips:

Book way in advance! The Beachfront Cottages are the most sought-after accommodations in Club Paradise. Regular guests even make reservations at the resort for their return visits for the following year. Aside from your own private toilet and bath, each beach-front cottage also has a private veranda area with a ham mock, and a tranquil strip of beach just a few steps away. City-philes will definitely be in awe seeing the lush green mountain ranges seen just across the clear, turquoise open water. It's a surreal experience!

Palawan sojourn

umang is called hermit crab, while I learned that umang is the local term for hermit crab.

Afterwards, we all headed to the gallery where Tibor toured the children around, explaining his works along the way. Although the paintings had heavy subjects such as the Spratley Islands' dispute and the impermanence of things, the children understood them.

While the children rested and fed, our group was taken to another island for the picnic lunch. The island, Air6, was known for its sand bar. A sandbar's not a place to get alcohol, mind you. It's a long strip of sand, much like a natural catwalk. The tide was high, so the strip wasn't so visible. It was a beautiful site nonetheless

We went back the restaurant, where the children were already in the middle of the art workshop. Somebody commented, "Where are the crayons?" Thor replied that there wasn't one, because he wanted to teach them how to make art out of things they encounter every day. The kids had a blast doing sand art, stick art and dyeing cloths.

In the end, Tibor emphasized that just because they couldn't afford the typical art materials like oil paints didn't mean they couldn't create art.

That night, we were all treated to a candlelit dinner by the pool. After dinner, we decided to drop by the staff's party—a monthly ritual where the resort's owners and heads of departments cook for the staff. The staff members, on the other hand, performed song numbers

Day 3

The staff suggested that we go kayak ing and diving in the morning while the water was still calm. We kayaked around the island spotting egrets, king fishers and other exotic-looking birds along the way. Think National Geographic live What I found amazing was while our side of the bay was calm, not too far was where the calm water acted as the shore for the slightly turbulent waves—as if the water had split personalities. If I'm not mistaken it was one of amihan's effects.

We headed to the receiving dock where Cynthia and I were informed of the diving basics. Manny, one of the dive masters, managed to cover the equipment use, hand signals and make us laugh. I guess it was to calm our nerves.

A boat took us to Helen's Garden, named so because it looks like an underwater garden with a variety of corals in that spot. I was having trouble equalizing the pressure at first, but I got over it quickly. I started to appreciate the corals and med to touch the fishes, but I (unintentionally!) scared them away. My guide, Franz, signaled for me to touch the meat of the giant claim. I thought it was fantastic and disgusting. I thought it must feel like rubber wellies when cooked. Franz pulled me back to the platform after whas felt like 10 minutes underwater. I tok! him that I wanted to see more corals if I have air left in the tank. So I went back for seconds.

We had the rest of the afternoon off. I swarm much because my shoulders were killing me from the morning's kayaking, it was a good thing I had my massage scheduled late in that afternoon. Unlike the rest, I requested for my massage at the cabana. I chose a perfect time as well, because the sun was starting to set.

They served crab for dinner. It was a not smaller than the ones I was used to so I thought it couldn't be crabs. I asked. "Is this the talangka?" Everyone at the table laughed. I blamed the people who told me that talangka was a smaller crab. I didn't know it was much much smaller than the crab.

The next day, it rained. I guess Palawan wanted us to stay. It mined so hard that our flight out was delayed for 10 hours. It was back to reality, indeed—back to the pollution, and the stress.

"It's a condition that runs in the family." Altergic minitis happens when there is swelling in the nose lining or nasal membrane caused by exposure to allergens such as house dust, pollen, animal dander, or

For Ricci house dust and pollution are the main culprits behind his allergic rhinitis attacks. "I get the sniffles and sneeze 30 40 to 50 times and more frequently with allergic rhin tis than with the common cold," he explains. A person who suffers from allergic rhinitis may sneeze repeatedly. The sneezing fits seem to follow a pattern and may happen almost daily, particularly upon waking up in the morning "But there's more to allergic rhinitis than that", Ricci adds "My eyes grow red watery, and tony My throat also starts to tch, which can make me feel awkward while acting and singing. I'm more scared of allergic rhinitis than the common coid!!!" he desperately screams

When left untreated altergic rhinitis can lead to the worsening of asthma, sinusius lear infections, and other complications. It's a good thing that with Benadryl AH (Diphenhydramine Hoi) Ricci has found reset from the bothersome symptoms of a lergic rhinitis such as non-stop sneezing with runny nose and itchy, watery red eyes.

Upon reaching the resort's dock, my companions and I were welcomed by music from kulin-tungs and a cold glass of hibiscus (that's gumamela to us) juice. It was distinctly Flapino without being mainstream. After Linch, our group moseyed around the resort First stop was Jonathan Benutez's hut, Dos Palmas's resident artist.

Jonathan, "Tibor" to the locals, depicts the typical life in Palawan in his works. His latest series showed underwater images, products of Tibor's numerous dives.

We then passed by spa village, which was disappointingly under renovation. We headed to the research center. The resident marine biologist, Alexis Principe, told us about the dugong sightings and pawikans (sea turtles) laying eggs on the island.

For the rest of the afternoon, I found myself distracted by the monkey's puzzle, which is a common term used to describe the seed of the tubigi (a certain mangrove fruit) because of its irregularly shaped segments. Forming the puzzle wasn't as easy as it looked. In the span of over two hours, I managed to piece three segments together.

When I heard that there was going to be a cultural show at dinner, I thought to myself, were we there to specifically eat or sleep? As it turned out the event would end up arousing my interests as it

The Big Names Behind the Big Event

Hyundai pulled out all the stops at the its Global Dealers Seminar as it was top-billed by HMC's most illustrious business heads. HMC HQ, Asia Pacific Regional HQ and HARI all worked together to bring about a more than remarkable gathering of professionals in the automotive sales industry

Mr B.G. Lee. of try direct in the Company

HMC HQ Executive Vice President, Mr. Bong Goultee, in his welcome speech on the occasion of the 2006 Global Dealers Seminar Asia Pacific Region, stressed the importance of unity and teamwork in building an empowered Hyundai brand and channeling its efforts to deliver utmost customer satisfaction. Mr. Lee particularly emphasized the vital role that the Hyundai Asia-Pacific Region played in strengthening Hyunda's global sales performance in 2005. The 26% sales increase from 2004 posted by the Asia-Pacific region, Mr. Lee reported, was the best record among the regions where Hyundai is present. Mr. Lee took the opportunity to thank the dealers and distributors of the Asia-Pacific region for their excellent and outstanding performance

Other top-brass executives in attendance include Su Dong Yeo, Director of Pacific Regional Headquarters, It Sung Seo, General Manager of Asia Regiona Headquarters; Woo Suk Yang, Genera Manager of Asia and the Pacific Team, Tae Hwan Lee, General Manager of Export Planning Team, Byung Kwon Rhim, General Manager of Export Promotion Team HMC, and Cheoul Woo Lee, General Manager of Export Market Support

HYUNDAI ASIA RESOURCES, INC

Accepting the honor for Hyundal Asia Resources, inc. was Ms Marie Fe Perez-Agudo, Frecutive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer

2005 was a great year for Hyundai Asia Resources, Inc. (HARI), the exclusive distributor of Hyundai vehicles in the Philippines. its reientless efforts to promote the Hyundat brand yielded outstanding results. HAR is constant hard work showed a 103% growth rate more than doubling sales from the previous year. From its 2004 ranking of 9th place amongst 18 automotive players, Hyundal jumped 3 notches up and took over the 6th rank by 2005.

An astonishing achievement, HARI cornered the market's grey sectors and achieved their 5% target market share. This segment of the market was more than satisfied with Hyundai's vehicles and services. From the Starex's thunderous victory, the Getz, Matrix, Sonata and Tucson found a steady foothold and entry point against competing brands securing a place in the hearts of the Filipino people.

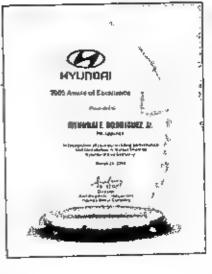

That same evening, Hyundai E. Rodriguez was given an award of excellence for being the top performing dealer in the country.

According to Car Awards Group, Inc. (CAGI) president Manny de los Reyes, "The test drives were a combination of instrumented and qualitative tests following the same format of other internationally recognized Car of the Year competitions lits basic objective is to determine which vehicle ruled in its class."

Eight contenders made their way to the testing venue for this year's Sub Compact Car category competition. Chevrolet Avec, Honda City, Honda Jazz, Kia Picanto, Suzuki Swift, Toyota Vios, Hyundai Matrix and the Hyunda Getz

According to CAG, officers, the Hyundal Gelz scored favorably among most CAGI members on price and engine performance during the CAG. sub-compact test drive competition. From price tags submitted by Hyundai As a Resources, Inc. rpm (HARI), official distributor of Hyunda, vehicles in the Philippines, it was evident that entry admission fees for all four variants of the Hyundai Getz do not exceed Php630,000. With such retail prices, Hyunda: made it clear that a worthwhile first car need not be expensive.

BEST SUB-COMPACT CAR OF THE YEAR

showroom as well as in its sales performance The 12-valve SOHC (single overhead camshaft) 1100cc gas engine puts out 66ps@5500 rpm and 10.1 kg-m of torque@3200 rpm, while the 1.4L engine puts out 95 ps@6000 rpm and 12.7 kg-m of torque@3200 rpm. And the diesel-fed 1.5LCRDI totes a variable geometry turbocharger (with ntercooler), 110ps@4000 rpm and 24 kg-m of torque@1900-2750

Likewise, the Hyundai Getz s "Space Wizard" concept, which features the vehicle's ability to accommodate

One other relevant factor where the five passengers in comfort, or 977 I ters of Hyundai Getz bested others in its class is its illuggage space, proves that this sub-compact's performance, both on the road in the performance is not limited to what is under the hood. Hyunda's ability to place compartmentalized trays, side boxes and unusually useful pockets in unconventional places comes in handy when storing bric-a-brac on the go, And the Getz's low NVH (noise, vibration and harshness) and solid feel are relatively uncommon for a sub-compact car

Further boosting the Hyundai Getz's credibility is the fact that it has won the hearts of the European market, selling more than 100,000 units in less than 14 months, this success prompted the organizers of the 2004 Athens Olympics to dub the Getz as the sports event's official

With the combined forces of an affordable image, unique engine performance and the international and now, local, credentials to back it up, the Hyundai Getz has truly made its mark in the eyes of the motoring public as the best subcompact car.

The Hyundai Getz, which won the Sub Compact Car of the Year plum, was not the only Hyundai vehicle that received recognition and acclaim from this year's Car of the Year (COTY) competition which had over 40 experts in the local automotive industry and motoring journalists for its panel of ,Ldges

In a short interview following the conclusion of the COTY awards night ast March 30, Ms. Maria Fe Perez-Agudo, EVP and COO of Hyundai Asia Resources, Inc. (HARi) exclusive distributor of Hyundai vehicles in the country said that, "the officers of HARI and, its mother company, Hyundai Motor Company (HMC), are grateful to the Car Awards Group, Inc. (CAGI), the COTY, and its organizers for having recognized Hyundai's strides to break new ground and make new inroads in the local automotive industry

Noting that Hyundai had "kewise won acclaim in several internationally recognized automotive car competitions last year particularly the 2005 Initial Quality Study of J D. Power and Associates, the automotive industry's most trusted survey firm where Hyundai seized third place in the ranking of non-luxury automotive brands, and the stringent US survey. Strategic Vision Total Quality Study. which revealed that the Hyundai Tucson and the Accent bested their rivals in the Small SJV and Small Car Segments, respectively, Ms. Perez Agudo, concluded that "the combined victories that HARI and HMC have won in the local and the international automotive market has proven and continues to prove that Hyundai is truly a global enterprise determined to make a difference in people's lives through world-class quality automobiles."

More than 70 cars participated in rigid assessments on fuel efficiency, acceleration, style design, handling, comfort and a host of other criteria during the test fests held from January to February 2006 at Forest Hills, Antipolo Votes were tabulated by the Independent organization, Sycip, Gorres and Velayo.

By Tessa R, Salazar

THE MOTORING SCRIBES HAVE DECIDED. The grand awarding night has been committed to memory, immortalized in still and moving pictures. Trophies have been hoistheady exhibaration of victory, and for those not chosen, the pain of heartbreak has subsided somewhat.

It took just a few seconds to open an envelope and announce a winner at the 2nd ed, and thank you speeches made. The Car of the Year-Philippines at the Rockwell Tent in Makati on March 30, That envelope, however was just the tip of the iceberg; the peak of a long, arduous process starting two months ago at the proving grounds of Forest Hills Goif and Country Club in Antipolo City that involved getting up close and professional (read-meticulously scientific) with 54 car models introduced from Sep. 1, 2004 to Dec.

> Like a rigodon that seemed never-ending, these 54 cars were "danced" by up to 40 motoring journalists at a time, such that by the end of the test drives, these journalists would have gone behind the wheels of a cumulative P154 million worth of cars, pick-ups, AUVs and SUVs, and answering 19 proping questions 54 times, translating to 1026 responses from each motoring journalist.

And this didn't yet count the two parameters for instrumented test ratings (for acceleration and braking) performed by five test drivers for each of the 54 vehicles, which translated to 270 instrumented drives for each of the 54 yeb cles.

From 54 candidates, members of the Car Awards Group Inc whittled that number down to the "magic 11"-the major category winners for the Coty-P And from that 11 emerged the overall Car of the Year--the executive sedan Mazda6 2,3-liter that earned the highest rat ing numerically overal.

For all that number crunching, Cagi was ably assisted by accounting firm Sycip, Gorres and Velayo, who conducted the official tabula-

This year's complete winner list: Hyundai Getz 1.1 GL for the sub-compact sedan (P749,999 and below); Mitsubishi Lancer MX Ltd. for the compact sedan (P750,000 to p999,999); Mazda6 2,3L for the executive sedan (P1 million to P2,499 million)

Chrysler 300C for the luxury sedan (P2.5 million to 3.999 million), BMW 530i Sport for the altra-luxury sedan (P4 million and above), Ford Ranger XLT for the pick-up category.

Toyota Innova D-4D G for the entry-level multipurpose vehicle or MPV (P1.399 million and below), Mitsubishi Grandis for the luxury MPV (P1 4 million and above)

Mazda Tribute 3.0V for the entry-level sports utility vehicle (P1 399 million and be-.ow), Volvo XC70 for luxury SUVs (P1 4 milhon to P3.999 million); Mercedes-Benz ML 350 for the ultra-luxury SUV (P4 million and above)

The Mercedes-Benz S350 bagged the Best in Safety Features; the Toyota Innova 2.5G won the Best Value for Money; the Audi A6 bagged the Best in Overall Design, and the BMW X3 2.0d won the Best in Technical Inno-

The general categories such as driving dynamics, interior, exterior, value added equipment, pricing and promotion of a car is incorporated in a questionnaire using an easy-to-compute 1 to-9 rating scale. Manny delos Reyes, this year's Cagi pressdent, explained that the rating used for the qualitative/subjective portion of the test was patterned after those used by motoring groups from Japan and other countries "with whom we coordinated prior to this endeavor." Among this year's survey questions, which showed minor changes from last year's set of questions, were: "Does the vehicle accelerate strongly and smoothly? Are the brakes strong and easy to modulate? Does the vehicle corner responsively? Does it feel stable? Are the shifts smooth and easy? Does the vehicle have a comfortable ride? Does it have sufficient ground clearance?"

Other questions focused on safety features, driver and passenger ergonomics, interior material/build quality, even the air-con and aud.o and/or video systems.

Instrumented testing

The quantitative/objective portion, on the other hand, involved acceleration and braking tests using the latest, fully digital US made G-Tech unit to measure those parameters provided by Cagi member Ferman Lao's Fusion R The quantitative testing was conducted by the same control group of drivers for each test. The test course for both qualitative and quantrative testing was a 1.2-km closed circult course at the Forest Hills Golf and Country Club in Antipolo. Delos Reyes explained that Cagi chose the circuit because it offered a technical and highly realistic driving environment by combining a steep 35 to 40-degree uphill climb that rewarded "torquey" engines and responsive transmissions, off-camber downhill esses that uncovered a car's handling balance, a sharp dip that tested suspension damping, a 400meter straightaway that emphasized low-end acceleration as well as braking power and modulation, and over half a dozen corners and curves (ranging from sharp to sweeping) that underscored a vehicle's combined acceleration, cornering and braking performance

"This year, we've also asked testers to pay closer attention to other parameters such as NVH (noise, vibration, harstness), build quality, fit and finish, level of amenities, and amount of safety features, among many others."

Armin Amio, Cagi founder and executive director, said that through Coty-P, the association is also brying to educate the car-buying

Five stars for the Mercedes-Benz M-Class .

THE M-CLASS HAS COME occupies a leading position in roader sets new standards parout of the crash-test program the SUV segment. In the Amerof the "National Highway Traffic Safety Administration" with flying colors, becoming one of the first SUVs to be awarded the maximum five-star rating for both the frontal and side crashes in the US-NCAP test. Having been highly successful in numerous safety tests covering all vehicle categories all over the world, Mercedes-Benz has now once again proven that, really, one star on the car is all it takes.

ican version of the NCAP test (New Car Assessment Program) the vehicles are subjected to a front-end crash at 36 mph (56 km/h) against a rigid wall. The Sincap test (Side Impact New Car Assessment Program) specifies an impact by a 1368-kilogram deformable barrier against the side of the car on a level with the frontseat occupants at 38.5 mph (62 km/h).

The M-Class debuted on the After earning five stars in American market six months both the frontal and the side ago and rapidly became a trendsetter. The Mercedes offricularly with regard to passive safety. The unitized body with its high-strength passenger compartment and generous deformation zones front and rear provides the basic foundation for outstanding occupant protection. Adaptive two-stage front airbays for the driver and front passenger, front sidebags, windowbags, belt tensioners and belt force limiters are all standard specification.

One unique new feature in the SUV segment is the Pre-Safe anticipatory occupant protection system. In critical driving situations where an accident threatens, the system cuts in like an athlete's reflexes, preparing the occupants and the velucle for a potential collision. As a precaution, Pre-Safe tensions both front seat beirs, moves the electrically adjustable front passenger seat to a safer position and, if a rollover appears imminent, also closes the sunroof.

in automotive history

THE VEHICLE THAT MARKED THE RETURN of the great American car now has the distinguished title of the most-awarded new car in automotive history, Consumers have embraced the Chrysler 300C's striking proportions, classic American design and advanced technologies, helping spur the Chrysler brand to record-breaking sales numbers

The beautiful styling and incredible performance of the Chrysler 300C created a package unlike any other in the marketpiace," said Jeff Bell, Chrysler vice president. "We are honored and proud of the recognition we have received for the Chrysler 300C and we plan to continue to delight our customers for the 2006 model year."

With Chrysler brand's long-standing tradition of innovative design, the modern elegance of the 2006 Chrysler 300C continues to make everything else on the road seem ordinary. The dramatic exterior design direction of the Chrysler 300C along with sophisticated interior amenities and command-ofthe-road technologies, establish a new largecar formula that includes style and performance not likely to be copied.

What's new for 2006?

The award-winning Chrysler 300C returns for 2006 with the same elements of its successful 2005 formula, strikingly beautiful styling, incredible performance, dynamic and controlled handling and unsurpassed comfort and spaciousness all at a stunningly affordable price.

The 2006 Chrysler 300C line-up includes the rear-wheel-drive (RWD) Chrysler 300C and the Hemi-powered Chrysler 300C.

Engine, transmission options

The 2006 Chrysler 300C is equipped with a 3.5-liter high output V-6 engine mated to Chrysler Group's five-speed automatic transmission with AutoStick. AutoStick features driver-selectable range control, offering a fully automatic or manual shift selection. The 2006 Chrysler 300C continues to feature the 5.7-liter Hemi V-8 engine, with cylinder deactivation, mated to the fivespeed transmission.

Additional safety features

A Tire Pressure Monitoring (TPM) system, which monitors the pressure inside each tire and alerts the driver to improper tire pressure conditions, is standard on the 2006 Chrysler 300C. The basic system uses an amber ISO symbol, which indicates when one or more tires are under-inflated. A premium TPM system is available on the Chrysler 300C, which displays all four tire pressures and warnings in the Electronic Vehicle Information Center display in the instrument panel.

A front-seat seat belt alert, which chimes to remind occupants to buckle up, and a speed control instrument panel indicator light also are featured on all 2006 Chrysler 300C vehicles.

Rear-wheel-drive technology

Chrysler 300C customers embraced the return to rear-wheel drive in 2005, Technologies such as Electronic Stability Program (ESP), All-speed Traction Control System (TCS) and Anti-lock Brake System (ABS) helped control Chrysler 300C cars in ways that were transparent to the driver, yet provided exceptional ride and handling characteristics

"Chrysler's rear-wheel-drive architecture transfers Hemi power to the pavement, while the ESP traction control and ABS offer safe control of the vehicle," said Craig Love, vice president of the rear-wheel-drive platform team, Chrysler Group. The five-link independent suspension delivers excellent handling and responsiveness to provide an incred ble smooth ride."

ESP enhances driver control and helps maintain directional stability, including uneven surface conditions and patchy snow, ice or gravel. If there's a discernible difference between what the driver indicates through the steering and the vehicle's path, ESP applies selective braking and throttle control to ries in 2005, Linen Gold Metallic exterior out the car back onto the driver's intended path. The system is calibrated for improved control of the vehicle under a variety of conditions and operates in a manner that is not intrusive under normal driving.

ESP also offers Brake Assist, which detects when maximum braking is required by sensing the rate of brake application. By applying full brake pressure to all four brakes, this system improves stopping distance.

All-speed TCS enhances mobility and prevents wheel slip when accelerating on slippery surfaces. It also provides a measure of directional stability control-an advancement beyond prior traction control systems.

ABS keeps the vehicle straight, while retaining steering capability when braking on slippery surfaces by preventing wheel lock-

The 2006 Chrysler 300C is also available as an all-wheel-drive model to provide excellent cornering balance under all driving conditions and improved traction in snow and wet-weather conditions. By driving continuously through all four wheels, the all-wheeldrive system, combined with standard ESP, All-speed TCS and ABS, adds outstanding performance and stability under all traction

"While chassis electronics and advanced tire technology help control the 2006 Chrysler 300C rear-wheel-drive models, some customers may opt for the all-wheeldrive choice," said Love. "We are able to offer what the customer wants in each case."

2006 Chrysler 300C lineup

The 2006 rear-wheel-drive Chrysler 300C features a 3.5-liter High Output V-6 engine and a five-speed automatic transmission with AutoStick that offers 250 horsepower and 250 ib.-ft. of torque, providing the perfect blend of performance and fuel economy.

In addition to the standard features available, the Chrysler 300C adds ESP with Brake Assist, All-speed Traction Control System, Four-wheel ABS, body-coloured heated mirrors, fog lamps, mini-carbon accent bezel on center console and leather-trimmed seats, steering wheel and shift knob

An optional Comfort and Convenience Group is available, featuring an eight-way power front passenger seat with power recline, heated front seats and express up/down front windows

The 2006 Chrysler 300C model features the 5.7-liter Hemi V-8 engine with Multiple Displacement System (MDS). MDS seamlessly turns off the fuel consumption in four cylinders of the Hemi engine when V-8 power is not needed, improving fuel economy by as much as 20 percent. This Hemi engine is mated to a five-speed automatic transmission with AutoStick.

With 340 horsepower (254 kW) and 390 lb.-ft. (525 Nom) of torque, the Chrysler 300C can go from zero to 60 mph in just 6.3 seconds.

Standard features on the rear-wheel-drive 2006 Chrysler 300C include all rear-wheeldrive Chrysler 300 with the Limited package standard features plus/replaced by the following: 18-inch chrome-clad aluminum wheels, Boston Acoustics six-speaker sound system with 276-watt digital amplifier with door trim badge, chrome, multi-function, power, heated foldaway mirrors with memory feature and driver's auto-dimming and auto-adjust in reverse, dual exhaust with bright tips, performance four-wheel disc anti-lock brakes, power tilt and telescoping steering column, premium leather interior trim, Satin Silver accent bezel on center console projector halogen headlamps with delay, rain-sensitive wipers, tortouse shell-style interior accents, trunk liner and a memory system for driver's seat, radio presets, steering column, display and pedals (if

The 2006 Chrysler 300C is also available as an all-wheel-drive model, which adds a front differential, transfer case and allwheel-drive front suspension.

Exterior colors

Exterior colors for 2006 Chrysler 300C include Bright Silver Metallic, Brilliant Black Crystal Pearl Coat, Cool Vanulla, Magnesium Pearl Coat, Midnight Blue Pearl Coat, Sarin Jade Pearl Coat and Silver Steel Metallic. Achieving even more technological highlights was a challenge for the engineers in Stuttgart and Sindelfingen, for the bar was set very high: the previous S-Class, which had been repeat edly voted the "Best Car in the World" since its presentation in 1998, was a hard act to follow. The progress Mercedes-Benz has made with the new saloon is based on this already high level. A dozen technical innovations have entered series production for the first time on board the new S-Class-from Brake Assist PLUS with radar sensors to seats with an extended massage function, from the night view assist system with the latest infra-red technology to the new Command system, and from preventive

Combining innovation, responsibility for sustainable future

than 100 years now, Ford Motor Company has initiated various projects aimed at protecting the environment and safeguarding it for future generations.

"Our vision for the future is simple: We want to build great products, a strong business and a better world," says Ford Motor Company chair and CEO Wittam Clay Ford Jr.

For Motor Company is spearheading global-scale initiatives to protect the environment: through the implementation of cutting-edge technologies and best-practices throughout the whole lifecycle of a vehicle-from R&D to vehicle engineering to manufacturing to recycling and disposal-the company has undertaken key environmental actions that have brought about very positive results.

Ford has pioneered the development of hybrid vehicles that combine fuel efficiency with comfort and performance, and holds the distinction of being the first au-preservation and conservation for more cars on the road. The company developed the world's first sport hybrid utility vehicle using "full hybrid technology." This technology enables the vehicle to operate on the electric motor alone, or the gasoline more alone or both at the same time. Unlike other "mild" hybrid vehicles, full hybrids can run exclusively on electric mode during slower speeds and do not need to engage the internal combustion engine as long as there is enough power stored in the battery.

Rénewable, alternative or flexi fuel is a part of Ford's global vision on innovation. Ethanol is the most popular and most abundant flext fuel around. Ethanol is a combustible alcohol made from fermentation of sugars, starch and other organic sources. It can easily be produced locally through agricultural crops like sugarcane, sweet sorghum, cassava, corn, potatoes, and other organic materials which contain carbohydrates in sugar or starch forms. Ford's interest in using ethanol as Henry Ford. Ford planned to use ethanol as the primary fuel for his Model T, before gasoline emerged as the dominant fuel.

Ford has developed and manufactured several flexi-fuel vehicles (FFV) that automatically adjust to any ethanol/gasoline mature for hassle-free and environmentally sound driving. Onboard sensors monitor the fuel mixture and the onboard computer adjusts spark timing and fuel flow to optimize performance. More than 1 million Ford FFVs have been on the road in North America, Brazil and Europe for the past 25 years. A $20-million flexifuel engine plant capable of producing 100,000 engines in the next five years is currently being built in the Philippines.

Prior to this, early initiatives of Ford Motor Company include the establishment of the Ford Research Library 50 years ago as a center of unrovation where automotive breakthroughs are developed. Through the years, the center has evolved into Ford Research and Advanced

The Ford ORD system is an air-assisted reductant injection system that enables exhaust treatment systems to help meet stringent future diesel emission standards worldwide, including the US Tier 2 and European Stage IV and V limits for smog-forming emissions.

Ford has very early on recognized that its products contribute to the change of the world's climate 18 percent of manmade CO2 emissions are caused by cars. Thus, Ford has endeavoted to be a global leader in the development of vehicle emission control systems. Coupled with the ever growing complexity of new regulatory requirements, these technologies-

A global "Substance Use Restrictions" standard has been put in place. Reviewed quarterly by company experts and revised and re-issued annually, this standard informs personnel and suppliers of certain substances which must be restricted in or excluded from products supplied to Ford or used in various facilities. Among these products are chromium in pre-paint coating, mercury-containing switches, lubricating oil, PCB transformers, emissions from painting operations, and only wastewater.

The Rouge Ford Center in Dearborn, Michigan is "a model of 21st century sustamable manufacturing." The overhauled facility features world-class flexibility, with assembly lines capable of handling three different vehicle platforms and nine different models.

With help of professional rally drivers of Applied Leisure in Sales and Operations Corp Raul Asuncion, Barry Ortiz, Joey Lanuza, Bingky Siddayao, LJ Garcia, Andre Palma and Ferman Lao, motoring writers had the opportunity to repeatedly do spirited driving 7/10ths, 8/10ths, even 9/10ths-at the enclosed technical them because they are winners in their course with some having redlined engines, locked brakes, and squealed tires while comering.

As a result, the motoring writers saw how each flashy and simple car available in the market for buyers could perform and do "other tricks up its sleeves".

The test fest team observed that the Forest Hills test track also revealed poorly sorted suspensions due to off-camber turus, downhill esses, and even a wicked dip that could lift a driver off his or her seat at only 50 kph. A series of fast and slow corners tested a gearbox's responsiveness-be it a manual or an automatic.

Several cul de sacs tested a velucle's turning radius. Virtually every aspect of a car's performance were evaluated.

The Rockwell Tent in Makan City has been the automotive media's venue of choice for its most important event for the second straight year.

TO THE WINNERS!

The second CAR OF THE YEAR (COTY-P) title went to the best of 11 best-in-class winners. Fifty-four motor vehicles vied for top honors underwent quantitative and qualitative tests over a span of six weekends this January and February at an enclosed area in Forest Hills Golf and Country Club, Antipolo

The Car Awards Group, Inc. (CAGI), an independent, non-profit, non-stock association of 40 motoring journalists from more than two dozen print, broadcast and online media outfits, conducted the tests with the aim of recognizing and encouraging the achievement of higher engineering, design, performance and safety standards by car manufacturers...

it would not have been at all possible without the support of COTY-P sponsors who share CAGI's belief in the valuable contribution of the automobile industry to Philippine economic progress and national development.

Those who supported and cooperated with the 2ND COTY-P deserve the nation's esteem and applause.

RP's answer to the global car awards phenomenon

IDEA MAY NOT BE original. Many countries have given tribute and laid honor to their own best performing automobiles

But for two years, the Philippine motoring media has removed itself from being mere envious spectators, and has become an active participant to this growing global phenomenon.

After several attempts in the past five years, a group of motoring journalists—Armin

Motorista.com.ph and Gadgets Magazine; Lester Dizon of Philippine Star, Aris Ilagan of Manila

Bulletin, Tessa Salazar and Andre Palma of the Philippine Daily Inquirer—finally figured out how to put the "thousand-piece" puzzle together. From this core group of five, the group has ballooned to over 40 journalists-encompassing print, television, radio and the New Media.

Now, with the conclusion of the second edition of the Coty-P, the Car Awards Group Inc reaffirms its firm commitment to catch up countries with that have made their own car of the year events deeply ooted in their soci-'s collective psyche. would be really nice to look our counterparts from awardees for the year. Malaysia, Thailand, and Indonesia in the eye and say that we are part of the Philippine Car of the Year," said Cagi president Manny delos Reyes.

Delos Reyes added that the car awards system in the country is still a far cry from those of the European, North American and Japanese Cotys, "but they have had decades more experience and are vastly better funded than we are."

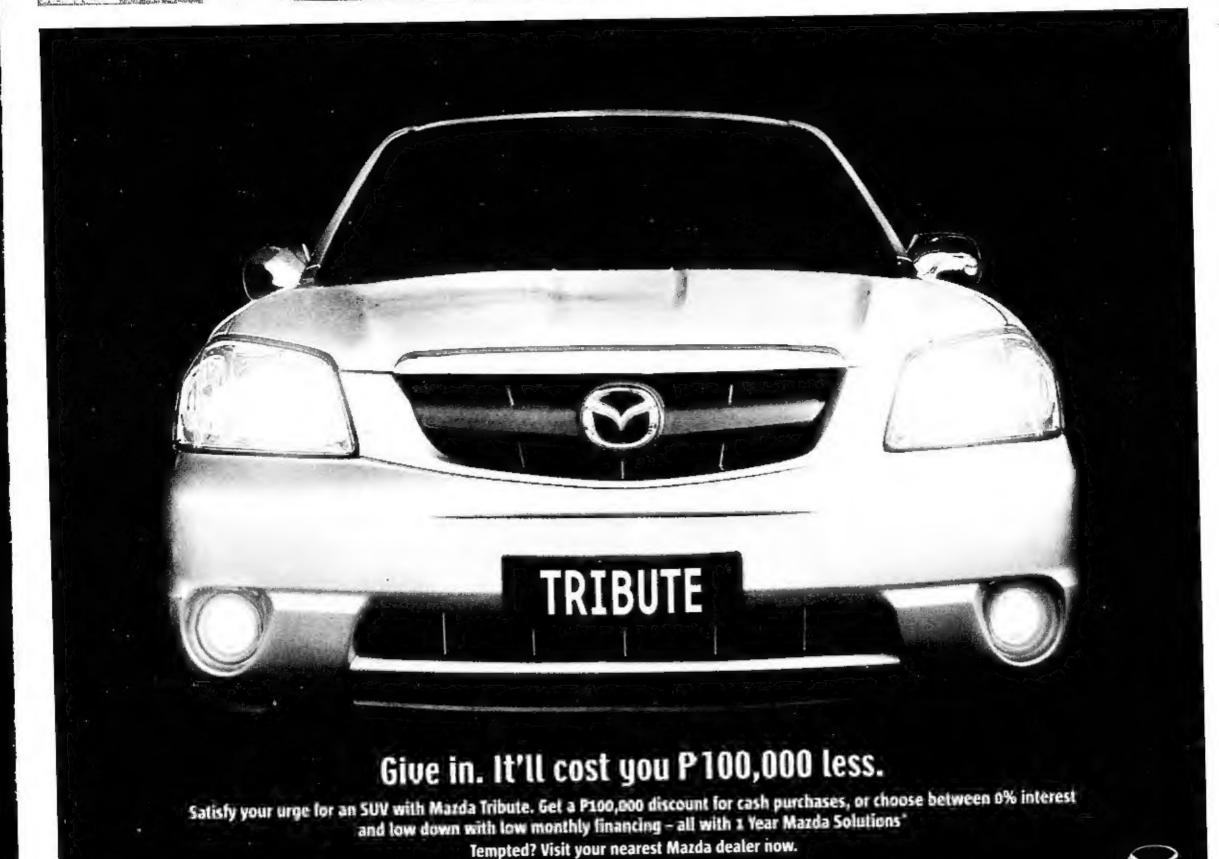

Coty-P is only 2 years old. It was founded by motoring journalists Amaia Amio (media outfit???) and Lester Dizon (Philippine Star), with Aris Ilagan (Manila Bulletin), Andre Palma and Tessa Salazar (both from the Philippine Daily Inquirer), and Ardie Lopez (RPN 9's "AutoExtreme") forming the core group.

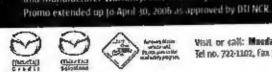

Though Coty-P is still in its infancy, it has made a considerable impact on the local motoring landscape, and car manufacturers look forward to being recognized among the Car Awards Group Inc's

"We have to start somewhere," Delos Reyes states. "Several local media outfits have their own respective car awards, but this does not mean that results will conflict or that one group's tests are better than the other. Even in Europe, America and Japan, various media have their respective awards but they all unite to form their respective countries' Coty. We should be the same".

"The Car of the Year project is an idea that's long overdue. In the back of every motoring reporter's mind, we know we have to put up a project similar to those being conducted by our counterparts in other countries. Subjecting ourselves and the vehicles we test to more objective testing procedures should hone our skills and set us at par with our colleagues in other parts of the world. We are looking beyond the Philippines in this project. We want to show to our counterparts in other countries that we, too, can do it," said Amio, now Coty-P executive director.

In its first year in 2004-2005, Coty-P was immediately recognized by the international motoring media. Motor Trend executive editor Matt Stone expressed his encouragement as he relayed this message through Inquirer's Tessa Salazar: "The fact that you gathered and tried to have the standards of professionalism ... that elevates the industry to a higher level."

Motor Trend magazine has the oldest and largest Car Of The Year program.

Other well wishers in 2004 were Yamin Vong of Cars, Bikes, Trucks in Malaysia; Greg Wilson of CanadianDrivencom, and Bijoy Kumar Y of the Business Standard Motoring of India.

The 2005 Coty-P is supported by the Manila International Auto Show, Rockwell Land Corp, Philippine Allied Corp. Coty-P winners at the Manila Auto Show

CONTINUING A TRADITION, THE MANILA fore seen special cars and concept vehicles International Auto Show will be the site for the public unveiling of the 2005 Car of the Year Philippines.

As expected, the Second Manila International Auto Show (formerly known as the Manila International Motor Show) will also dazzle with new model introductions and never-be-

It is set once again to provide an annual venue for car buyers and enthusiasts alike to take a closer look at the latest models and significant concepts from the country's premiere auto makers.

The show will open on April 6 and will run until April 9, from 10 am to 10 pm at the World Trade Center, Roxas Boulevard, Pasay City. This year marks a much larger show with a strategic alliance with the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines (CAMPI), which presents the show as their annual showcase of what's new: and what's important in the industry." There's much more to do with these major exhibitors: Audi, BMW, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Dodge, Ferrari, Pord, Honda, Hyundai, Isuzu, Jaguar, Jeep, Kia, Maserati, Mazda, Mercedes-Benz, Mitsubishi, Nissan, Peugeot, Porsche, Toyota and Volvo. Aside from static displays, numerous test drives will available.

To whet the car enthusiast's appetite, several car launches are being floated as possible Manila International Auto Show firsts. The biggest news has got to be from Honda - with their all-new 8th generation Civic. Jeep will make its Philippine return with the Commander, which will debut with the all-new Chrysler Pacifica huxury wagon, both exclusively distributed by CATS Motors. Toyota is expected to go all-out luxury with their allnew Previa. Nissan Motor Philippines plans to take a slice of the premium SUV market with their 265 horsepower Murano. Kia Motors will introduce the all-new Rio sedan and hatchback. Hyundai will introduce their all-new Santa Fe SUV

The exhibitors want to outdo their own displays last year and for the first time, announced an amazing array of concept and never-before seen road cars. Mitsubishi Motor Philippines will proudly display their rally heritage with the Dakar-winning Pajero Evolution plus the Lancer Evolution IX MR and the Eclipse 3.8 V6. Ford Group Philippines will flex their compact car muscle with their 225 horsepower Focus ST and Focus DuraTorq diesel. Mercedes-Benz will preview the future of motoring withdemos of the F-Cell hydrogen-powered fuel cell car, as Isuzu demonstrates its Elf Hybrid truck. Toyota's TF105 Formula One racecar will represent the company's motorsports ambitions. The evocative 550-hp Mo-

Luxurious living redefined

CHANGE IS IN THE AIR AT THE Bonifacio Global City. The fast-growing cosmopolitan hub is adding a new prestigious address to its impressive cityscape-the Seibu Tower, a high-rise residential condominium managed by Golden Forum Land Inc.

On an evening of champagne, sushi, and music, president Harvard V. Yu unveiled a scale model of the 27story modern monolith at the NBC Tent in Fort Bonifacio. Shuttles transported guests to Seibu Tower's model units housed less than 10 minutes away from where Asya Design Partner's much-anticipated architectural gem would rise-on 6th Avenue corner 24th Street, a prime piece of property that sits right at the heart of the Glob-

Guests took in the contemporary yet cozy interiors designed by Architect James R. Macaraig. From the dropdown ceiling and the cove lighting, to the built-in bed and the rich wood paneling, quiet elegance and functionality underline the philosophy of Seibu Tower. The pièce de résistance, though, is the 270-degree panoramic alcove window, a priceless luxury afforded in all corner units. Depending on the unit's orientation, lucky owners can get a stunning vista of Manila Golf, Laguna de Bay, the Makari skyline, or Pasig's sprawling metropolis. Access to such spectacular views is Seibu Tower's grandest feature, keenly incorporated by its multiawarded principal architect Albert S. Yu into the blueprint of the residential trary, its units are priced remarkably masterpiece, which he dubs "an epitome of modern architecture that binds man with his environment."

Set amidst a progressive urban landscape teeming with leisure hotspots like the Fort Strip, restaurants, malls, a world-class gym, a renowned spa, and other retail stores, Seibu Tower is indeed a yuppie's or a family's ideal home. Business districts Makati and Ortigas, and Naia are just minutes away via Edsa and the C5 Road; while prominent educational and banking institutions are likewise within easy reach. To make life even more convenient for Seibu dwellers, the first three floors of the building will house commercial establishments, such as salon and cafe. Residents can also enjoy the condominium's 30-meter lap pool, kiddie pool, bubble and jet spa, jogging trail, and well-manicured garden.

With all these amenities, including ample four-story parking spaces, 24hour security, and automatic fire alarm and sprinkler systems, Seibu sounds like an opulent haven with an extravagant price tag. On the con-competitive, almost half the cost of its neighboring condominiums. At P48,000 per square meter, a 41square-meter single-bedroom unit can set one back for only P1.9 million. Once it's furnished with dropdown ceiling, flooring, cabinets, and other fixtures, the price can increase marginally by as little as P10,000 per square meter. Seibu also offers twoand three-bedroom units that cover anywhere from 72 to 118 square meters. Select units come with a balcomy that's perfect for stargazing.

By cutting out the middle man-the real estate developer-project manager Golden Forum Land is able to bring costs down to a very competitive level. Under the expertise of CE Construction, ground breaking begins in December 2006; and turnover is slated for December 2008.

Yu remarked in his speech, (Seibu) is our biggest achievement in our three years of operation... Our company is young, dynamic, and very aggressive in ensuring the success of our enterprise through 100-percent customer satisfaction." Gauging by the Seibu Tower's successful launch that evening and the number of sales closed, Yu and his team are off to a very promising start.

If you want to view Seibu Tower's model units, visit Golden Forum Land at 31st corner 2nd Street, Bonifacio Stopover Fort Bonifacio, Global City. Appointments and inquiries can be made at 819-1913/819-1959/816-

LakBYKE Mabuhay Tour offers on-site registration

TO ENABLE MORE CYCLISTS FROM METRO Manila and nearby provinces to participate in the LakBYKE Mabuhay Tour 2006 slated for April 6 to 8, event organizer Galing Pilipino Movement (GPM) will open up on-site registration facilities at the OC Memorial Circle pick-up point and at the San Fernando, Pampanga tour starting point at the Pampanga Provincial Capitol at the morning of Saturday, April 8.

The LakBYKE Mabuhay Tour 2006 is an educational-cultural bike tour that will retrace in reverse the grueling Death March by Pilipino World War II veterans and heroes and the valiant defense of the Philippine nation against a superior enemy. This event seeks to achieve a "consciousness reversal" in our observance of historical events. Instead of focusing on "defeats" such as the Fall of Batzan, the event focuses our historical perspective on the uplifting values of solidarity and collective self-reliance manifested by "Galing Pilipino" heroes. To commemorate this momentous event, the LakBYKE Mabuhay Tour will retrace the Death March in reverse, and on bikes, starting from Capas, Tarlac, leading to San Fernando, Pampanga to Mariveles, Bataan and finally ending in Balanga, Bataan. In total, the LakBYICE Mabuhay Tour will travel over 130 kilometers of

The schedules of the three-day bike tour are: On April 6 (provincial-based bikers), a tour of historical shrines around Tarlac; on April 7 (for provincial-based bikers), retracing the route World War II prisoners took from Capas, Tarlac to San Fernando, Pampanga; on April 8 (for Metro Manila and provincial-based bitters), retracing the Death March route from the San Fernando, Pampanga old train station to Km 0 at Mariveles, Bataan, and ending in Balanga,

During the event, activities at each stop will enhance the tour experience. On April 6 in Capas, Tarlac, a "Galing Panimula sa Capas", the

"Galing Leadership Forum", "Galing Parangal Para sa mga Bayani", and a "Mabuhay Concert" greets bikers and other participants of the Tour. On April 7, during the run from Capas to San Fernando, there will be a symbolic "Galing Salubong", "Galing Kalinangan Pagtitipon", and a "Mabuhay Concert." Finally, on April 8, at designated routes at Guagua, Layac, Hermosa, Orani, Balanga, Pilar, Mariveles and at the Bataan Capitol will be held culminating events such as "Ambag-Pagkain", "Galing Leadership Forum", "Paggunita Tour", and "Parangal sa Beterano". The Tour will be capped with a grand fireworks display and the Galing Pilipino Mabuhay Concert at the Bataan Capitol.

Interested participants from Metro Manila can proceed to the bus pick-up point at the Quezon City Circle at 4 a.m., or directly to the starting point at the San Fernando Provincial Capitol at 7 a.m. on April 8 and register on-site. For inquiries on registration fees and other details, call the Galing Pilipino Movement at 631-3932 or

The Galing Pilipino Movement is a non-profit, non-political, non-sectarian private sector initiative that recognizes, affirms and propagates what is good and galing (excellent) about being Pilipino, about Pilipinos and about the Philippines as a counterforce to the negativism and cynicism that erodes our sense of nationalism and collective worth, GPM wants to make goling the brand mark of this generation of Pilipinos. ## TB still a dangerous disease world recently observed tuberculosis day. Global TB care providers have set a day every year to remind everyone of the scourge of tuberculosis. The observance this year commemorates the 124th year of the discovery of TB bacterium by Dr. Koch.

disease caused by bacteria called mycrobacterium tuberculosis. The bacteria can enter the body, usually the lungs, and make a person sick by damaging the tissues that it reaches.

When a person with TB of the lungs coughs, shouts or sings, TB bacteria is expelled into the air. TB bacteria is carried within tiny, invisible droplets several hours.

TB, like death, is a great leveler. It does not matter if a person is rich or poor, educated or illiterate, young or old. Anyone who breathes in the TB course, there is a world of difference between being infected and having the disease. Unlike those with TB disease, those "infected" do not have any symptoms. If their immune systems are strong, infected people will not develop TB disease. But what if their Tuberculosis or TB is an infectious . immune systems are weak? TB easily develops with lowered immunity.

Do not suffer the children-this is the message of worthy guardians of children in the Philippines today who have seriously taken the task of preventing childhood TB in the Philippines. Spearheaded by Philippine Ambulatory Pediatries Association of the Philippines (Papa) and Pediatrica of moisture that can float in the air for lnc with the support and coordination of the World Health Organization, POTTS Foundation, the Department of Health and local government units concerned, these guardians have, for the past three years, been

PEOPLE FROM ALL OVER THE bacteria will have TB infection. Of implementing a program known as A Community Based Tuberculosis Program in Children. This is basically a TB diagnosis and treatment program primarily directed to children to complement the current TB program for adults. According to Dr. Jocelyn Yama! bao-Franco, president of Papa; "they" are already on their fourth communication ty, having successfully implementeds it in three communities-Sta. Rosa, Laguna, Mabalacat and Floridablanca,

"We intend to bring this kind of treatment to a large number of communities and train enough doctors and nurses so that it becomes a continuing program in places where this has been implemented. With the continuing support of the core groups of participating sectors, the program may well be on its way to implementation nationwide," Yambao-Franco

roductFiles The greatest berbal hair dye

FROM THE NUMBER OF LOcal television commercials with ladies flipping around their long flowing tresses and the amount of time (and money) that is spent on a daily basis on beautifying one's hair (just check the lines at your local salons), it is no wonder that Filipinos are known to be passionate about their hair.

Many people dye their hair regularly, to give a different touch to an otherwise ordinary look. Yet, choosing the right hair dye is essential, as hair dyeing must be done often to continue having that solid hair color for a prolonged period of time. This means choosing a hair and scalp-friendly hair dye is vital.

This is where Amir's Henna Hair Dye comes in. It's a henna-based hair dye, a herbal dyeing agent and conditioner that brings out a rich and healthy glow to hair. Amir's doesn't contain any harmful chemi-
